D. C. Budget Requests for 1950 Cut to 110 Millions

Reduced Estimates Are Still 10 Pct. Higher Than Those For Current Year

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

District department heads, laboring under a stern mandate to keep their requests down, yesterday asked for $110,188,648 to run their agencies during fiscal year 1950, which begins July 1, 1949.

Budget Officer Walter Fowler, who released this information, said the District is "faced with a tremendous job to find money to pay for the things we need." He declared the Commissioners "will undoubtedly recommend a 2 per cent sales tax."

The 110-million-dollar total represents a 10-million-dollar reduction from estimates of departmental fiscal requirements submitted in July, but even this is still almost 11 million more than the appropriations for the current year.

Pay Boost Headache

An additional headache facing the budget-makers is how to raise $5,500,000 to cover a pay raise for the District's 18,000 workers. A $330 a year pay boost was given to Federal workers by the last Congress, but the District employes were ignored. The 110-million-dollar budget total does not include pay rise money.

The estimates, which will be released to the public, department by department, during the next two weeks, will be examined by the Commissioners starting September 27. The sessions will be executive ones with individual department heads, followed by a public hearing about the third week in October.

Both Commissioner Guy Mason and Brig. Gen. Gordon R. Young, Engineer Commissioner, confirmed Fowler's prediction about the renewal of a request for a District sales tax.

Mason Is Pleased

General Young declared, "A sales tax is a necessity for the District." He explained that consideration of individual departmental requests should be prefaced by "a general picture of how much money we will have coming in," and, so far as he was concerned, he would consider a 2 per cent sales tax as part of the likely revenue.

The estimates showed clearly that department heads had hardened to the Commissioners' directive ordering no expansion of staff or capital expenditures except under certain limited conditions.

Commissioner Mason was obviously pleased with the 10-million-dollar slash. "We rode herd on them," he said. "They had to believe us. There is no money for new things."

The Commissioner said heads of departments under his control had cut "requests to the bone" and even those might yet suffer the economy ax.

General Young had no comment.

Mule May Battle Boa Constrictor In North Carolina

Walnut Cove, N. C., Sept. 16 (U.P.).—A tough Stokes County mule and a deadly boa constrictor will meet in mortal combat here Saturday unless State officers forbid.

Skeptical Tar Heel farmers attending a carnival decided the barker was going a little too far in his build-up of the "serpent that swallows animals," and called for a showdown. The fight was arranged.

Liberal Party Figure in N. Y. Backs Dewey

Albany, N. Y., Sept. 16.—Thomas E. Dewey today further dampened the outlook for President Truman in the State of New York by making his most important liberal alliance to date.

Dean Alfange, one of the founders of New York's Liberal Party and an ardent supporter of the late Franklin Roosevelt, came out unequivocally for Governor Dewey and said:

Judge Suggests Farmers Shoot Thieves From City

A country-bred magistrate took some errant city folk to task yesterday in fining two Washington men $50 each for stealing beans and corn from a farmer.

Judge Alan Bowie, in Hyattsville Police Court, also suspended a three-month sentence against the defendants, Thomas Parks, 22, 2810 Rhode Island ave. ne., and William R. Johnson, 39, 615 Roxboro pl. nw. The men said they had been invited by a chance acquaintance to pick all they wanted.

Judge Bowie, a Southern Maryland tobacco farmer when not on the bench, castigated city people who "come out here and are willing to take things you aren't willing to sweat for from the men who grow them by their sweat." He suggested the only way for farmers to break up the practice would be "to empty a load of shot" into the thieves, adding that "down my way we used to load a shotgun with black-eyed peas, and they never came back."

Long-Sought Son Rejoins Parents Here

A forgiving father and a weeping mother swept their repentent son into loving embrace last night, after he returned from an 16-month odyssey to "find" himself.

"My boy, my boy," was all Mrs. Joseph Murdock could utter between sobs of joy as she clutched her 18-year-old son on the landing of a Pennsylvania ave. stairway.

Dr. Poling to Head 3-Sect Chapel of The 4 Chaplains

Philadelphia, Sept. 16 (A.P.).—Dr. Daniel A. Poling, editor of the Christian Herald, today gave up the pulpit of the largest Baptist Church in Philadelphia to become chaplain of the Chapel of the Four Chaplains—a shrine dedicated to all people of all faiths.

His responsibility will be to complete the $250,000 shrine that will unite a Hebrew Tabernacle, a Catholic altar and a Protestant pulpit.

The chapel memorialized the four chaplains of the three faiths who died arm-in-arm in the sinking of the troopship Dorchester in 1943 after it was struck by a torpedo. One was Dr. Poling's son, the Rev. Clark V. Poling.

Lilienthal Sees Atomic Science Hurt by Probes

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

David E. Lilienthal, Atomic Energy Commission chairman, yesterday charged that congressional spy hunts are threatenng the Nation's atomic enegy program.

At the same time, he dropped a hint that work on atomic energy has passed another milestone. But whether such success was in military development, conversion of atomic energy industrial use, or elsewhere, he would not say.

Lilienthal lashed out against attacks on scientists from "petty or prejudiced or malevolent sources" in a speech to science writers covering the centenary sessions of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, at the Statler Hotel.

Without mentioning the House Committee on Un-American Activities by name, he made it obvious that he thought "anonymous villifications" were originating at hearings held by that body, and were frightening top scientists away from Government work.

He termed the result "a disturbing situation that threatens the success of the atomic energy enterprise of this country."

"It is ironic," said Lilienthal, that this danger should become

Woman Red To Be Called In Spy Probe

Louise Bransten Named in Hearing As Director of Contacts for Party

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

The House Committee on Un-American Activities announced last night that it was issuing a subpena for Mrs. Louise Bransten, well-known wealthy Communist Party leader, in connection with its current inquiry into Russian espionage into this Nation's atomic energy secrets.

In hearings before the committee last October, Mrs. Bransten, former wife of Richard Bransten, otherwise known as Bruce Minton, one-time editor of the New Masses, was identified as Communist Party "sharper," who directed the manner in which party contacts were to be made.

Linked to Vice Consul

Mrs. Bransten was directly linked in testimony, not only with the Russian Vice Consul in San Francisco, Calif., but also with a Russian-speaking engineer who arranged to see if J. Robert Oppenheimer, noted atomic scientist, could be persuaded to divulge radiation experimentation for the benefit of the Soviet Union.

Oppenheimer absolutely refused to have anything to do with such an attempt on the grounds that it would be a treasonable act.

Louise Bransten, according to testimony, was "closely associated with Peter Ivanov, the Russian vice consul in San Francisco, Calif.".

She was also closely associated, according to the sworn testimony of Louis J. Russell, committee investigator and former FBI agent, with George Charles Eltenton, a Russian-speaking employe of the Shell Development Corp. in Emeryville, Calif., who had spent considerable time in the Soviet Union.

Contact in 1942

According to testimony, Eltenton was contacted in 1942 by Peter Ivanov, a vice consul of the Soviet government in San Francisco, and asked to secure information on the highly secret radiation work at the University of California.

Eltenton, the testimony stated, in turn contacted Haakon Chevalier, a professor at the University of California.

"Eltenton told Chevalier that he had a line of communication with an official of the Soviet government who had advised him that since Russia and the United States were allies Soviet Russia should be entitled to any technical data which might be of assistance to the Soviet government," Russell testified.

It was then that Chevalier made the totally unsuccessful approach to Dr. Oppenheimer, Russell said.

Eltenton was placed in the testimony at a party given by Mrs. Bransten on November 10, 1944, along with his wife, Dolly.

Louise Bransten, it was reported, tried at one time to secure employment for Dolly Eltenton with the American-Russian Institute through Gregory Kheifits, whose name has also appeared before in connection with the atomic espionage case.

Chairman J Parnell Thomas (R., N. J.) announced that the committee has heard a total of 18 witnesses so far in the case of Arthur Adams, missing Canadian-educated Russian espionage agent who has fled the country.

Adams is expected to form the link between the Canadian spy

Gaullists, Reds Fight In France

General Unruffled As 10-Minute Battle Rages in Street Near Him at Vizille

Paris, Sept. 16 (U.P.).—Communists and Gaullists fought a 10-minute battle within a few feet of Gen. Charles de Gaulle today at Vizille, near Grenoble.

Police country-wide were alerted for possible further violence as a spreading Communist-led strike movement left more than 500,000 idle. Tens of thousands more were scheduled to walk off jobs tomorrow.

Steel-helmeted security guards joined 1000 police in cordoning off the National Assembly building to prevent mobs from marching on it.

The fight at Vizille began when Communists tried to break up a scheduled appearance of De Gaulle in Place de L'Hotel de Ville, in front of City Hall.

De Gaulle's bodyguard tried to open a path. Within a few minutes, Gaullist sympathizers joined the melee. Some men in both factions used clubs, but most of the fighting was with fists.

De Gaulle Watches

De Gaulle, unruffled, watched the slugging for a few minutes and left unharmed. Several persons on both sides were injured, none seriously.

Tension increased when some 250,000 Paris metal workers walked out and Premier Henri Queuille announced plans to raise cigarette taxes 30 per cent, alcohol taxes 50 per cent, and income taxes 20 per cent in an effort to save the franc from further inflation.

Protest strikes plagued the government from one end of France to the other. The metal wrokers in Paris held mass meetings in the plants. They called for a 33 per cent wage increase, and protested against the arrest of strikers who took part in yesterday's street rioting in which 60 persons were injured seriously.

The metal workers will return to their jobs tomorrow morning, according to orders of the Communist-led General Confederation of Labor, but other walkouts are in progress at Orly and Le Bourget airfields in Paris and in the coal mines of northern France.

Many Protests

Protest demonstrations have been held in almost every province against the drastic economic policies of the Queuille government.

Queuille's new tax plan was handed to the assembly tonight. Under it gasoline taxes for priority users would be raised 25 per cent and nonpriority drivers would receive a small monthly ration at a considerably higher price, which has not yet been decided.

The income tax increase is designed to hit "external signs of wealth" such as the rental of automobiles and hiring of servants. It would not affect the monthly withholding tax paid by all French wage earners.

Queuille's program calls for a 30 per cent increase in taxes on industrial, commercial and agricultural profits and on professional earnings.

Whittier, Calif., Sept. 16 (U.P.).—Two German war orphans today calmly faced returning to their fatherland because their foster parents say they are incurable Nazis.

American Legation Aides Accused of Taking 'Spy' Pictures

By John M. Hightower
Associated Press Reporter

The United States yesterday accused Romania's Communist government of forcing the recall of four members of the American diplomatic mission in Bucharest last week by charging them falsely with spying.

The four—two officials of the legation and two women clerks—were detained overnight by Romanian secret police in the city of Giurgiu. They were reportedly denied food and water for 16 hours and otherwise treated in a manner which the American Government denounced as "inexcusable."

The State Department made public notes exchanged on the subject between the American Minister in Bucharest, Rudolf E. Schoenfeld, and the Romanian Foreign Ministry. At the same time the Department released a statement which dealt at length on the methods of the secret police.

The complaint of espionage was based on a charge that the four had made photographs in a for-

Britain Slashes Trade Deficit by Economy Program

London, Sept. 16 (A.P.).—Britain's economy program and export drive slashed the nation's trade deficit in the first half of this year to less than one fourth of the 1947 total, the government announced today.

A White Paper said revised estimates for the first half of 1948 showed a provisional deficit of £140,000,000 ($560,000,000), as compared with a deficit of £630,000,000 ($2,520,000,000) for the whole of 1947.

Sir Stafford Cripps, chancellor of the exchequer, called the news heartening, but warned optimism "must be tempered by qualifications," including the proviso that "there is no exceptional element that intervenes, either in the political or economic sphere, to upset our achievements."

U. S. Reported Asking Soviet Action at Once

Signs of Progress On Berlin in 'Day or Two' Needed to Keep Moscow Talks Alive

By Walter Kerr

Paris, Sept. 16 (NYHT).—The United States, it was learned tonight, has proposed to Great Britain and France that the Western powers break off the Moscow talks on the German problem if evidence of progress does not come from the Soviet Union within the next day or two.

The American plan is to take the issue immediately to the Security Council of the United Nations or to the General Assembly, which opens here on Tuesday.

It is understood a communique to this effect already is being prepared in London and that it will be made public over the weekend unless some encouraging word comes from Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov.

48-Hour Limit Dropped

This means an impasse once again has been reached and that hope for a settlement at this time has all but disappeared.

The rupture of negotiations, in turn, would mean continuance of the Russian food blockade of Berlin, reinforcement of the Western airlift and public debate of a problem which secret discussion could not solve.

Paris informants said the United States wanted to give Molotov just 48 hours for a reply when Western representative called at the Kremlin the day before yesterday. It is believed, however, that this approach was abandoned, that no time limit was fixed, but that the Soviet Foreign Minister was made fully aware of the critical stage of the talks. His statement that Premier Stalin was on vacation and unavailable for further meetings may be taken as an indication of his attitude.

Dispute Over Currency

Despite the secrecy that has marked negotiations from the beginning, the rock upon which the talks are breaking apart now is known.

In early conferences Russians, Americans, British and French reached what is called an agreement in principle that the Soviet mark should be circulated as the sole currency in Berlin on the condition that it be supervised by a quadripartite commission. Agreement in principle means nothing more than that the idea is acceptable, provided an understanding can be reached in its implementation.

In Berlin, however, Western informants say that Marshal Vassili D. Sokolovsky raised conditions which they could not satisfy. It involved the powers of the proposed commission, in particular the question of control over the Soviet bank of issue. For his part Marshal Sokolovsky said he feared

Beauty Contests In Italy Verge On Pandemonium

Rome, Sept. 16 (U.P.).—Italy's beauties displayed their qualifications last night in competition for the title "Miss Italy" and:

1. A contestant in Bologna stripped off her clothes and charged the first-place winner with getting by on "false pretenses."

2. Seven judges in Rome barricaded themselves in a hotel kitchen to escape fuming parents and friends of girls who were disqualified because they refused even to show their ankles.

Donatella Capozzi of Reggio Emilia tied with Carla Landotti of Piacenza for second place, while Ornelia Zamparetti of Bologna was declared "Miss Emilia of 1948."

Donatella protested the decision. She said Carla and Ornelia were not as well equipped, naturally speaking, as she, and she challenged them to an "honest showing of your beauty without clothes."

Aided by her mother, Donatella began stripping. The judges appealed for order, but spectators shouted them down with, "make it a democratic election. Everybody strip."

Senate Group Investigating

Plan to Junk Plane Parts By WAA Brings Complaints

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Charges have been laid before the Senate Investigating Committee that the War Assets Administration has ordered millions of dollars worth of serviceable aircraft engine parts to be scrapped after October 1.

The complaints—also submitted to Defense Secretary Forrestal—allege that junking the equipment would be harmful to national defense and costly to the American taxpayers.

The WAA admits that it plans to melt down large quantities of the engine parts or sell them to junkers but contends the program is in the national interest and is required by a recent act of Congress.

A spokesman for the Ferguson Committee acknowledged that staff members are investigating the complaints, but declined to comment on the merits of the charges pending completion of a preliminary probe.

President W. W. Brinckerhoff of the Air Carrier Service Corp., one of the complainants, termed the WAA scrapping program an "outrage." He declared his company which provides all types of service for foreign airlines operating into this country, has continuing demands for the engine parts in maintaining American built airlines flying between Europe and South America and the United States.

"These parts have both commercial and military value," said Brinckerhoff. "They belong to the American taxpayer. If sold to airlines of friendly foreign nations, our own domestic airlines, or private fliers they'll bring a fair return back to the Treasury. Melted down, they'll bring next to nothing."

Deputy WAA Administrator Robert E. Minnich told The Washington Post that the scrapping of aircraft engine parts costing originally about 100 million dollars is planned as a part of the WAA liquidation program. He admitted that much of it was in serviceable condition, but contended that the planned action is the best course possible under the situation.

WAA still has title to aircraft equipment costing originally about 500 million dollars, he said. Much of it has a little value, but some 89 million dollars worth of Pratt & Whitney engine parts, still have considerable worth. On hand also are parts for other aircraft engines costing originally 41 mil-

Court Asked to Seize Porter's Records in Patterson Will Case

District Court was asked yesterday to authorize seizure of all records of Charles B. Porter, former Washington Times-Herald treasurer who plunged to his death Tuesday from a Clarksburg, W. Va., hotel window.

The request was made by Countess Felicia Gizycka, daughter of the late Eleanor M. "Cissy" Patterson, publisher of the Times-Herald. The countess is suing to set aside Mrs. Patterson's will charging fraud, undue influence and questioning her mother's mental capacity to dispose of her 15-million-dollar estate.

In the original will, Porter also was named as one of the Times-Herald executives to inherit it. However, Mrs. Patterson eliminated him as a beneficiary in a codicil to her will in the spring of 1947.

Under the will, Countess Gizycka receives $25,000 yearly, the decedent's personal effects and substantial real estate. The Times-Herald is given to seven of its officials. Friends and charities receive the rest of the estate.

In asking the court to appoint a collector of Porter's papers, records and files, the countess stated that she believes Porter, "at the time of his death, was possessed of highly important written evidence" bearing on Mrs. Patterson's will. The petitioner said this evidence is necessary to determine justly the issues in the will contest.

Meanwhile, the executors of Mrs.

Dutch Minister Here to Confer On Red Activity in Indonesia

Communist activity in Indonesia brought the Netherlands' new Foreign Minister, Derk Stikker, to Washington last night for hurried consultations with Secretary Marshall and other American officials.

It was thought that he came with new information which he was anxious to submit personally to the Secretary. The Foreign Minister came by air, at his own initiative, after discussions at The Hague with Australian Foreign Minister Herbert V. Evatt on the problem of Communist activity in southeast Asia.

Shortly before Stikker reached Washington, the State Department issued a statement saying the United States had been keeping a close watch on the "rapid increase" in Communist activity in Burma, Malaya, Indo-China and Indonesia since the start of this year.

The statement, read to reporters by Press Officer Michael J. McDermott, said the State Department had taken this activity into account in determining "its course of action."

"To win support and allies in their drive for power," the statement said, "Communist leaders have consistently pretended to champion the cause of local nationalists and have attempted to identify communism with national-

Angler Fowler Shows Results: Fish From St. Lawrence, Funds From Congress

"Oh, Lord, help me to catch a fish so big that even I, when telling about it later, won't have to lie."

That's the prayer, friends whisper confidingly, that produces such fine finny results for Walter Fowler, the District's budget boss, among the pike and bass of the Thousand Islands.

Fowler's piscatorial proficiency is but a summer diversion. His principal job is angling funds from Congress rather than angling fish in the St. Lawrence.

As Budget Officer, the tall, trim native Washingtonian must persuade District department heads they are not getting too little funds, and then convince Congress that the District isn't spending too much.

D. C. "Field General"

Fowler is the District Commissioners' field general in command of the annual skirmish on Capitol Hill. He has to justify proposed expenditures of $100,000,000 or more a year, and be prepared to justify every one of the thousands of items that go into a municipal budget.

This annual assignment calls for infinite patience, even temper, and dogged persistence. The District's 53-year-old fiscal chief has these qualities. Together they perhaps explain his slightly stooped posture.

Walter LeRoy Fowler—descended from the Abercrombies, Conways, and Coles of Virginia—was born in Southeast Washington, a few blocks from his present home at 1360 Maple View place, where he lives with his Kansas-born wife and 17-year-old daughter, Marilyn, a student at Anacostia High School.

He attended Central High School, got a law degree at Georgetown U., passed the bar, and stuck up a shingle in the Woodward Building in 1917.

After several months of "starving to death" as an attorney at law, Fowler pulled down the shingle and went to work for the District government as a health inspector.

After eight years of protecting the District's eating population from ptomaine, Fowler was promoted to assistant corporation counsel. In this job his legal leaning bloomed and flourished. He became adept in the courts, prosecuting violators of the law, or pleading the District's case for condemnation of property needed for expansion of municipal services.

Wrote 1000 Opinions

In 1940, Fowler made a survey for the District government and wrote 1000 opinions on as many pieces of tax-empt property. Fowler concluded, in effect, that of the

WALTER FOWLER
District budget boss

$12 million dollars in tax-exempt property, the District ought to be getting some taxes on at least 30 million dollars worth.

As it turned out, Congress wrote a new law not only exempting the 30 million dollars in property, but more. Fowler's prodigious feat, however, impressed the District Commissioners, and they offered him the vacant budget officer's post.

"Who, me?" asked Fowler. "I'm a lawyer, not an accountant."

"We'll hire all the accountants you need," replied the Commissioners, "We want you as an administrator."

So, in 1941 Fowler gave up trying cases in the courts here to plead the District's case before Congress every year.

The silver-haired, ruddy-complexioned District official is active in the Masons and Methodist Church. For more than 25 years he has taught Sunday School, and now he conducts the King Bible Class of the Anacostia Methodist Church, which, because of overflow attendance, meets in the Masonic Hall at 14th and U sts. se.

The inevitable question about the District budget director has been saved for the last.

Question: Who bosses the budget in the budget boss' home?

Answer: The Fowlers don't keep a budget.

bidden area. Romania demanded that they be withdrawn. The United States complied with the demand but rejected "as contrary to fact" the charge that forbidden pictures were taken.

The incident started September 6, when Wayne W. Fisher, third secretary and vice consul of the legation, Paul H. Green, an attache, and two clerks, Miss Ruth V. Garr and Miss Peggy M. Maggard, left Bucharest to visit Alexandria, the Danube River port of the city of Giurgiu. Traveling in an automobile bearing diplomatic tags, they arrived at Alexandria about 6 p. m.

On the way, the State Department said, they had made seven photographs of an ox cart and peasant, a herd of water buffalo and a native well. All the pictures were taken "more than 30 miles from Giurgiu" and no additional ones were taken.

After a brief visit in Giurgiu, they asked a traffic policeman for directions back to Bucharest. A man in civilian clothes jumped on the running board of the car and gave them the impression that he would assist in finding the way.

When he simply directed them around the city square, they became suspicious that he was a police agent and Green thereupon produced his diplomatic passport and demanded the right "to proceed without further hindrance." The man on the running board produced credentials showing him to be a member of the security police and insisted that the four Americans accompany him to headquarters.

That was the start of a night of trouble for the Americans.

Green and Miss Maggard eventually went to police headquarters, while Fisher and Miss Garr kept watch in the automobile. The Romanians insisted that the Americans turn over their camera, and on two occasions Romanian agents tried to pull open the car door. Each time it was pulled shut by the Americans.

The State Department said Green tried several times to telephone the American Legation at Bucharest but was denied permission by the Romanian Security Police Chief, a man named Nedelcu.

Miss Maggard asked for food at 9 p. m., but nobody got to eat until 10:30 the next morning.

Late in the morning Green was told that his passport was in order and taht he could return to Bucharest by train, but that the other three members of the legation staff were to be held. Green refused to leave the others in Giurgiu.

Held 17 Hours

At 11:15 a. m. he finally got permission to phone the legation—17 hours after the group was first detained. Fifteen minutes later Nedelcu informed the four that all were free to go to Bucharest. They promptly did so.

The Romanians declared that the four Americans had been seen by "numerous witnesses" to be making photographs in "diverse points of city and port despite the fact that there were large signs in these areas plainly marked photography prohibited."

The State Department said the two American women left Bucharest last Monday and the two men on Tuesday. All temporarily have been assigned to Vienna.

Fisher's home is at Glidden, Iowa; Green's at Newark, Ohio; Miss Garr's at Newton, Kans., and Miss Maggard's at Kansas City, Mo.

The reason for boosts by Congress over Commissioners' requests in past years has frequently been an interest by a Congressman in some particular department or pay raises granted after appropriation requests are submitted.

The current departmental requests began developing last July. The total then submitted was $120,129,408, which Fowler, leading "No" man of the District government, declared was "fantastic" in the light of revenues likely to be available.

Called for Realism

"It would have been a herculean task to analyze each, so the Commissioners decided to let the department heads do their own paring down," Fowler said. "They were told to make their requests realistic," he added.

Now Fowler will sit with the Commissioners as they discuss individual requests "to see how closely they've followed the directives."

The business of keeping expenditures within the limits of anticipated income "will be a tough one this year." For one thing, there "are no longer any savings such as the 10 million dollars remaining after the war to dip into," he explained.

For another, the current requests are not the bloated variety submitted last year when each department figured it was time to catch up on capital outlays shelved during the war. "They went just haywire then—anything they could dream up, but that's not true this time," Fowler noted.

$600,000 for Pay Rise

The 110-million-dollar total requested by the department heads includes $9,456,817 in the highway fund, $6,337,000 in the water fund and $94,394,831 in the general fund.

About $650,000 of this is the direct result of the Federal pay increase. This is caused by:

1. Added salaries to Federal workers employed in District government offices, but "not in and under the District."

2. A boost in payments to St. Elizabeths Hospital, where the daily rate jumped from $3.90 a day to $4.15 in July, upping the annual bill for care of District residents by $450,000. This was caused primarily by the salary increases, Fowler said.

3. Raises granted to Federal workers employed in the District Court, United States Court of Appeals, the United States attorney's office, the National Capital Park and Planning Commission and the National Zoological Park.

Among the perennial revenue-raising measures already suggested is the operation of a lottery. Fowler and Mason both brushed this aside quickly. Mason commented, "There is no possibility of a lottery. It would be a shame if the United States, the richest Nation in the world, had to resort to gambling in its Capital City to pay workers' salaries."

Court Seizure of Porter's Records Asked in Will Case

Patterson's will filed an answer stoutly contesting the charges made in Countess Gizycka's suit to set aside the will.

In defending her mental capacity, they said:

"In newspaper and professional circles, the decedent was possessed of rare business acumen, intelligence and insight. In civic and social life, she was keen, judicious and experienced. Every quality of her mind indicated sound judgment and wise determination."

The executors are William C. Shelton, general manager of the newspaper, its editor, Frank Waldrop and Attorney Joseph Brooks, New York attorney.

Air of Mystery Develops

Shelton and Waldrop receive two sevenths of the newspaper if Mrs. Patterson's will is sustained.

At the same time, an air of mystery was given Porter's death, officially a suicide, by news columnist Drew Pearson, who is Countess Gizycka's former husband.

He pointed out that Sidney Epstein, Times-Herald reporter, flew to Clarksburg to return with three bags belonging to Mr. Porter. Epstein said he turned them over to Mrs. Sibille Campbell, former housekeeper for Mrs. Patterson and who resides in the Patterson mansion, 15 Dupont Circle here. Mrs. Campbell was named executrix of Mr. Porter's estate.

Asked whether he cautioned the Clarksburg coroner not to release Mr. Porter's belongings, Pearson replied:

"The Clarksburg coroner is quite right. I most certainly did caution him about releasing the personal papers of the late C. B. Porter. Furthermore, the West Virginia State police were so suspicious of the fact that a representative of the Washington Times-Herald arrived at 2 a. m. by special plane to take delivery of Mr. Porter's papers that the police consulted the prosecuting attorney before finally releasing them.

"Mr. Porter was one of the few men who was familiar with the financial affairs of Mrs. Patterson. He himself told me that efforts had been made to get him to return to Scotland following her death. Apparently some people believed he knew too much.

"The circumstances surrounding Porter's death are strange indeed, including the fact that he jumped or was pushed through a window screen. This is not the ordinary act of suicide. Coming simultaneously with the death of another figure in the Patterson case, Miss Betty H[illegible]es (Times-Herald society editor), the West Virginia police and the police of the District of Columbia will be remiss if they do not investigate thoroughly."

Attorneys William E. Leahy and James F. Reilly entered the case yesterday in behalf of Mrs. Patterson's executors.

Representing Countess Gizycka are attorneys Harold A. Kertz, Randolph E. Paul and William A. Roberts.

Two law firms, previously hired & Ellis, of Washington, and Jackson, Nash, Brophy, Barringer and Brooks.

also will defend the will in behalf of the executors. The firms are Kirkland, Fleming, Green, Martin

Indian Troops Near Hyderabad Capital

To U. N. Council

India Denies Hyderabad's Appeal Right

By John G. Rogers

Paris, Sept. 16 (NYHT).—The United Nations Security Council, in its first meeting of the U. N. autumn stand in Paris, took up the Hyderabad case today and heard from India an assertion that Hyderabad has no right to appeal to the Council because it is not an independent state.

While the Hyderabad delegation charged before the Council that it was the victim of India's "brutal invasion," the Indian delegation defended military operations in the princely state as necessary to preserve public order.

But, the principal burden of the speech by Indian delegate Sir Ramaswami Mudaliar was the contention that Hyderabad could not appeal to the Council because "it is not a state . . . is not independent . . . and never was."

Sir Ramaswami placed special significance on the importance of denying the right of Council appeal to Hyderabad, which he described as an "area." With this argument, he was implicitly warning other U. N. countries that if they admitted the Hyderabad complaint to formal hearing, they might set a precedent that could be used by dissatisfied minorities of many countries.

The upshot was decision by vote of 8 to 0 to admit the Hyderabad complaint to the Council agenda, but with the reservation that such action did not preclude later decision to toss it off the agenda.

On that vote, China, Russia and the Soviet Ukraine abstained.

The reasoning of the majority appeared to be that while it might yet be proved that Hyderabad has no sovereign status and thus no right of Council appeal, qualified admission of the case to the agenda at least served to open the process of argument and gathering of evidence in a critical situation that may demand urgent action.

2.5 Million Written Off

Prague, Sept. 16 (U.P.).—Czech and American officials announced the signing of an agreement today which writes off more than $2,500,000 worth of American lend-lease claims on Czechoslovakia.

The Czechs agreed to pay the equivalent of $172,961.45 within 10 days of the signing. The total claim was for $2,762,075.67.

New Delhi, Sept. 16 (AP).—Indian military reports said tonight invading forces had pushed to less than 50 miles east and 63 miles west of the capital city of Hyderabad.

Press reports from Poona, jumping-off point for the Indian army's thrust on the west, said the hardest fighting is yet to come, however.

These reports said Hyderabad state forces were falling back on all fronts in an orderly fashion and everywhere were intact. These forces would be available for the decisive fighting on the central plateau.

Hyderabad state troops, which include infantry, armored cars and horse cavalry, and Razakars (Moslem volunteers) were reported digging in on a 30 to 40-mile perimeter around Hyderabad and Secunderabad, and resistance was growing.

The impression was widespread that the Indian army's timetable called for victory in less than a week. The campaign was launched Monday.

The Razakars were reported being employed chiefly in sniping from wooded positions. Where supported by state troops they were said to be fighting well, but a number surrendered when left to hold positions independently.

An Indian communique, reporting the latest victory, said the railway station in Munirabad, north of Hospet in the southwest, had been captured.

Meanwhile, Moslems in Pakistan were reported demanding that their government make some declaration of policy about India's action against Hyderabad. The Statesman's correspondent at Lahore, in the Pakistan part of the Punjab, said there was urgent enrollment of volunteers and defense preparations.

Travel across the border, restricted for many months, had practically ceased.

The Indian government imposed postal and telegraph censorship and control of radio and telephone communications today.

Military reports from Madras said Gurkha troops had reached Narkatpalli, on the Hyderabad-Masulipatan road. Narkatpalli is 50 miles east of the capital's military suburb of Secunderabad and even closer to Hyderabad city.

A communique said Indian troops captured Zahirabad, 63 miles west of Hyderabad city.

The communique and the Madras reports thus indicated that spearheads of the Indian forces are less than 125 miles apart in their simultaneous drives from east and west.

The War in Hyderabad

INDIANS ADVANCE—As the United Nations Security Council yesterday voted to look into the Hyderabad war situation, Indian troops pushed toward the capital city of the princely state. Reports said Indian forces driving east and west were only 125 miles apart; that Adilabad had been reached and that 100 prisoners were taken and 40 killed by troops mopping up around Osmanabad (underlined). Roads were heavily mined around Khammamett (underlined)

Lie Favors Western Bloc, Pravda Says

Moscow, Sept. 6 (U.P.).—Secretary-General Trygve Lie of the United Nations was accused by Pravda today of "taking sides" with the Anglo-American bloc in international affairs.

Jacob Victorov, foreign editor of the Communist Party newspaper, made the charge in a critical analysis of Lie's recent annual report.

"Lie's position corresponds to the interest of the Anglo-American bloc and not to the interests of peace and the security of nations," Victorov wrote. "Trygve Lie is not only unobjective, but is actually taking sides with the Anglo-American bloc and supporting the bloc's activities which are directed towards evading and violating the Charter of the United Nations, which is inconsistent with the aims of this organization."

Diplomatic circles viewed the Victorov article seriously. They said Lie's position, which requires general confidence, would become untenable when his impartiality is attacked by such an important Soviet organ.

Victorov took exception to practically every important issue in Lie's annual report. For instance, Lie was accused of supporting the Anglo-American bloc on the issues of atomic energy control, bacteriological warfare, Greece, Korea, Palestine, and Indonesia. He said Lie's report "distorts the essence" of all the main events in international political life."

The article accused Lie of "openly defending measures intended to bypass and harm the United Nations," such as the Marshall Plan. It said Lie "acts as an obedient executor of the line of the Anglo-American bloc in undermining the United Nations."

Czech Purge Due This Fall, Refugees Say

Frankfurt, Sept. 16 (NYHT).—A major purge of key officials of the Communist government in Prague is scheduled for October, the Czechoslovak Relief Committee predicted here today. This information is based on reports from recent political refugees who have escaped from Czechoslovakia to the United States zone in Germany.

Vaclav Nosek, the present Minister of the Interior, who controls all the police, will probably be replaced by Alexei Cepicka, now the Minister of Justice. Others on the Cominform blacklist are William Stroky, the Slovak vice premier; Jaromir Polansky, the Minister of Finance, and Gen. Ludvik Svoboda, Minister of Defense, the Czech Relief Committee stated.

This shakeup of the Communist Czech government is likely to parallel similar successful and attempted purges of lukewarm or untrustworthy Communists in the Polish and Yugoslav governments.

"There is a growing tension between the Cominform and the nationalist wings of the Communist Party in Czechoslovakia," said Pavel Tigrid, a former Prague newspaper editor and now the head of the Czech Relief Committee in Frankfurt.

"Moscow has ordered a purge of all those in the party who are not strict adherents of the Marxist-Lenin doctrines. This demand has given impetus to extremists in the party who are now advocating wholesale collectivization of land and a harder fight against pro-western elements," Tigrid stated.

Cepicka, described as one of the most fanatical Communists, played a major role in the coup d'etat last winter when the party gained complete control of the Prague government. Recently he married Marta Gottwald, the 28-year-old daughter of President Klement Gottwald.

Indonesians Ready to Meet Force in Java

Singapore, Sept. 16 (AP).—Reliable sources said tonight the Indonesian Republican army apparently is prepared to meet force with force if pro-Stalinist Communists attempt a coup d'etat in Java.

That is the interpretation responsible Indonesian circles in Singapore put on the stand taken yesterday by the Republican commander in chief, General Soedirman. He said the army would take action to suppress disorders which have broken out between Stalinist and Trotzkyist Communists in Soerakarta, 40 miles from Jogjakarta.

Soedirman added that the internal disorders were becoming a threat to the Indonesian state and would not be tolerated. This was considered to be significant, since Soedirman for years has been an intimate of Communist leader Amir Sjarifoeddin, a former Defense Minister and former Premier.

Until now it had been believed that Soedirman might have been Sjarifoeddin's man. There were fears he might throw the army behind any possible coup and swell the Communist forces.

However, Indonesians in Singapore say Soedirman's radio attack on the disorders—specifically those touched off by pro-Stalinists in Soerakarta—lines him up squarely behind the nation's moderate Premier, Mohammed Hatta, and his coalition government. Hatta leans toward socialism but is anti-Communist.

Hatta announced today a Soerakarta court had freed two men who had been held on charges of complicity in an unsuccessful coup. The court found insufficient grounds for prosecuting Tan Malakka and Abikusno Soerkarni.

In Batavia, the court action was interpreted as a move by the Hatta government against Moscow-line Communists. Malakka has been supported by the Gerakan Revolusi Rekjat (People's Revolutionary Movement), which is viewed as Trotzkyite. The GRR has been considered the most important political opponent of the Communists.

Heavy Firing Is Reported In Holy City

Tel Aviv, Israel, Sept. 16 (U.P.).—Heavy fighting broke out in Jerusalem tonight and both sides were using artillery, a radio message from the Holy City reported.

The message said artillery fire started at 8:35 p. m.

"Arabs and Jews are now using all they have," the message said. "It looks like war again."

This advice, which came from a usually reliable source, was received by the United Press a few hours after Foreign Minister Moshe Shertok accused the United Nations of "systematic discrimination" against Israel.

Shertok Seems Nervous

Shertok asserted the U. N. had adopted an attitude of appeasement toward the Arabs with the result that they had succeeded in considerably strengthening their positions in Palestine since the second truce went into effect July 18.

Asked whether the Jews had increased their strength during the truce, Shertok said:

"I am afraid not."

Shertok, who was pale and nervous in contrast to his usual smiling attitude, said no peace negotiations were under way with the Arabs.

Shertok was flanked at his press conference by Yigal Yadin, Israeli Army Chief of Staff, and Moshe Dayan, commandant in Jerusalem.

He said ominous Arab military activity had been observed in various parts of Palestine, especially in the Judean Hills, near Jerusalem. Authentic information, he said, showed heavy Arab troop movements.

It was indicated that Shertok felt that the entire truce might collapse now at any time.

Shertok said that U. N. truce observers were "impotent" and could not stop truce violations.

Reds Revive Drive to Scrap Atom Program

Paris, Sept. 16 (U.P.).—Russia revived the disarmament issue today when Soviet Delegate Yakob A. Malik called on the U. N. Commission on Disarmament to meet some time before the 58 U. N. countries begin their 1948 Asembly Tuesday.

A key American delegate, meanwhile, said the United States would press for Assembly approval of its policies on such major East-West issues as world atomic energy control, Greece's dispute with her Communist-dominated neighbors, and Korean independence.

He said the United States will bring up these issues regardless of whether Russia continues to "fearfully hide behind its iron curtain."

The Soviet move for disarmament discussion on the eve of the Assembly meeting appeared to mean the Russians will revive two big projects they undertook in previous sessions: (1) A bid for a world-wide program for reducing national armaments and scrapping America's atomic program and (2) an attempt to indict the United States and other Western countries as warmongers.

Speaking at the American Club in Paris, United States Delegate Philip C. Jessup said that despite Russian opposition the United States will stick to its drive for approval of its atomic energy control plan and would ask for another extension of life for the Balkans-Commission and the "Little Assembly."

There seemed little doubt the session, first to be held outside the United States since the inaugural meeting in London in 1946, will turn into a crucial propaganda battle between the United States and Russia.

Malik's sudden request for a disarmament meeting was made in a letter to Syria's Naris El-Khouri, current president of the 11-nation commission. It said Russia disagreed with the proposed commission report to the Assembly and therefore was calling for a fresh meeting in keeping with the commission's rules.

The majority report Malik seeks to change states there is no use discussing disarmament until world conditions improve and there is less suspicion among nations. It says that a thick line must be drawn between problems concerning atomic energy control and the more general ones of armament reduction—a distinction Russia fought vehemently.

One man was held for action of the grand jury and another defendant was freed at inquests held yesterday into two slayings.

Ordered held was Rudoph Miller, 51, 1926 2nd st. nw. He was charged with the fatal shooting of a tenant, Rufus Armstrong, 27, same address, in an argument over eviction last September 9.

In the second case, David Burton, 45, of 11[illegible] 6th st. nw., was freed in the pistol-slaying of Clarence Smith, 21, of 1159 1st st. nw., last September 13.

The coroner's jury held the shooting to be accidental after hearing testimony that Smith was shot with his own pistol in a struggle for the weapon during a fight at Smith's home.

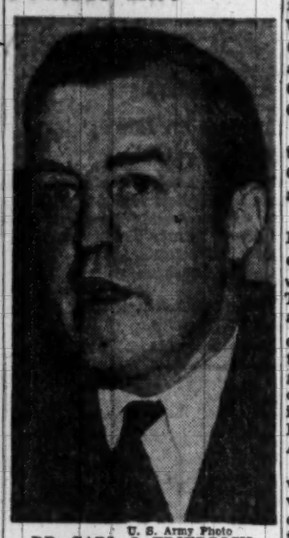
Airlift Worth Put At 10 Times Cost

Clay's Aide Praises 'Lift'



U. S. Army Photo
DR. CARL J. FRIEDRICH of Harvard University, special consultant to Gen. Lucius D. Clay, said yesterday that the airlift into Berlin could go on for 20 years and would be the finest propaganda weapon the western powers could use

By James M. Minifie

The airlift into Berlin could go on for 20 years and would be the finest propaganda weapon the Western powers could use, Dr. Carl J. Friedrich, special consultant and adviser to Gen. Lucius D. Clay on governmental affairs in Germany, said yesterday.

His view of the airlift fitted into the picture of allied plans for Germany that developed yesterday as follows:

1. Representative Charles A. Eaton, chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, consulted with John Foster Dulles, Gov. Thomas E. Dewey's foreign policy adviser, on the "profoundly serious situation for our Nation and the world created by Russian aggression." He said they also discussed "Communist penetration" in France, Italy, southeastern Asia, Indonesia, Korea, China and the American continents.

2. President Truman met briefly with the Cabinet a day in advance of his usual weekly meeting owing to his scheduled departure today on a campaign trip. Secretary of State George C. Marshall stayed behind after the meeting to talk further with the President.

Barkley Returns

3. Senator Alben W. Barkley (Ky.) returned with other members of Congress aboard the presidential plane Independence from Rome, after a swing through Europe. Senator Barkley expressed the belief that a peaceful settlement is possible, but he added that it was "difficult to know how far the Russians are willing to go and difficult to assess if they are willing to make war at this time." He said that the European Recovery Program had "definitely improved" the drive for recovery in Italy and that conditions had improved in Berlin.

4. British Ambassador Sir Oliver Franks said after a talk with President Truman yesterday that the Chief Executive was impressed by the importance of Anglo-American unity "in the present situation. We had a general discussion," the Ambassador said. "The President discussed the importance of our countries sticking together in the present situation."

Insisting that the Berlin Airlift was worth 10 times its cost in propaganda effect, Dr. Friedrich said: "We gain by the lift so much more than we lose by the blockade that I would leave it up to the Soviets to bring it to an end."

Dr. Friedrich said that the propaganda effect of the airlift was not limited to the Germans, but went all through Europe, including nations behind the Iron Curtain. The rate of desertions from the Russian Army had also increased since the airlift went into effect, he said.

Called "Foolish Act"

He called the blockade of Berlin "the most foolish thing the Soviets have done in three years of foolish operations in Germany." He added, "anyone who tackles the United States on a technological level is a complete fool."

"If the people of the United States make up their mind, they can not only supply Berlin for 1 to 20 years but could cover the city with goods," he said. He pointed out that up to the present no attempt had been made to build special planes and airstrips for the operation. If this were done, he said, it would not be impractical to envisage an in-and-out flow of 10,000 tons a day. This, he said, would be "such a magnificent opportunity to demonstrate to all Europe the peaceful power of the United States that I would go on developing the airlift until the western zones bloomed by comparison with the Soviet zones."

Eric Johnston to See Molotov Today

Moscow, Sept. 16 (AP).—Eric Johnston said tonight he will confer Friday with Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov and Foreign Trade Minister A. I. Mikoyan.

Russia Demands Lifting of MacArthur Ban on Jap Government Strikes

By The Associated Press

Russia yesterday demanded that the American ban on strikes of government workers in Japan be lifted along with other "repressive measures" against labor.

The demand was made at the regular weekly meeting of the 11-nation Far Eastern Commission, top policy-making agency for the Pacific, by Soviet Ambassador Alexander S. Panyushkin, Russia's representative on the FEC.

The strike ban was ordered by Gen. Douglas MacArthur, Allied supreme commander in Japan, on July 22 and put into effect by a Japanese government ordinance July 31.

Panyushkin charged that this violated the 1945 Potsdam declaration and existing policies of the FEC, which call for formation of trade unions in occupied Japan.

Russia has been attacking the order in Tokyo and over the Moscow radio for weeks.

Recently Secretary of the Army Royall said the Army does not feel that MacArthur has violated either FEC or United States policies in forbidding government strikes.

"The Soviet delegation considers that the Far Eastern Commission cannot by-pass such a gross violation by the supreme commander" of FEC policy, Panyushkin said in a statement today.

He asked the commission to "request" MacArthur to revoke the no-strike directive.

He also proposed that "repressive measures" against the workers and employes of governmental enterprises and institutions should be discontinued.

Panyushkin accused William Sebald, United States chairman of the allied council, of giving a distorted version of FEC policy directives to a special August 28 meeting in Tokyo.

The Ambassador, saying that 400 persons have been arrested up to September 1 in connection with the Japanese government strike situation added:

"No police or other government agencies should be emloyed in spying on workers, breaking strikes, or suppressing legitimate union activities."

Monty Calls Off Out-of-Town Trips

London, Sept. 16 (U.P.)—Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery, chief of the British Imperial General Staff, has canceled all out-of-town engagements because of the seriousness of the international situation, it was made known today.

Montgomery plans to remain in London at all times to handle personally his part of the government's drastically stepped-up military preparedness program, including the strengthening of the regular army and the territorials, corresponding to the American National Guard.

Canceling engagements to visit the military commands at Liverpool and Bootle, Montgomery explained to the commanding officers in a letter that it was "impossible" for him to leave London at present because of the government's precautionary defense plans.

The cabinet's economic committee met with chiefs of the fighting services today at the official residence of Prime Minister Clement R. Attlee, No. 10 Downing st. Attlee himself presided despite his illness. It was believed the committee discussed military appropriations.

There was increasing pessimism here over the possibility of an agreement with Russia in the Moscow negotiations on the Berlin blockade.

U. S. Seeks Action by Reds

Allied control over the whole Soviet zone because the bank of issue for Berlin would be the same as the bank of issue for the zone. For their part American, British and French representatives saw an attempt to get around the agreement in principle reached in Moscow.

For this reason the discussion was transferred back to the Kremlin where the Western delegates on Tuesday told Molotov either to change Sokolovsky's instructions to make them conform to the agreement or to allow them to argue out the matter with Stalin. The reply was, nothing could be done until a report came from Soviet headquarters in Berlin and that, anyway, Stalin was on vacation.

It is not believed likely here that the situation will change much in the next day or so and a communique from the Western capitals may be expected. Molotov may want to throw responsibility for rupture on Washington, London and Paris, and for his own reasons he may welcome a combination of the status quo mixed in with public debate.

Reds Raid West Berlin After Stoning by Youths

Berlin, Sept. 16 (AP)—Soviet jeeps patrolled Berlin's sector borders and made several quick incursions into American territory today after a band of youths stoned Communist-controlled police.

The jeep raids caused no trouble though a Soviet soldier fired one shot over the head of a German thief near the American sector.

Soviet patrols were out in force as west Berlin anti-Communists held a funeral for a victim of the east-west cold war—a 16-year-old German youth killed in the climax to last Thursday's anti-Soviet mass meeting.

The patrols were believed to have been instituted when it was arranged to have the funeral cortege pass near the Soviet sector. These plans, however, had been changed.

Released After Arrest

United States military police said the Soviet jeep manned by an officer and a soldier invaded the American sector near Potsdamerplatz but withdrew before United States patrols could reach the spot.

Earlier, the Soviet-controlled press reported that a crowd of about 150 Berlin youths attacked and stoned three police in the Soviet sector who were passing a black market center.

The Soviet press said the youths were "incited by older people," and that 15 of the rock-throwers along with one of the adults were arrested. The youths later were released, the press report said.

Policeman Manhandled

This was the third stoning of Communist-controlled police and soldiers in recent weeks. The first two such incidents brought gunfire retaliation from the Soviet side. The second incident last week resulted in the 16-year-old youth being killed and about 20 injured.

An east-sector policeman also was manhandled today when he tried to stop a truck carrying "black market goods," the Soviet-licensed news agency reported.

German City Hall officials said the Soviet trial of a German city official, Dr. Curt Mueckenberger, had been adjourned shortly after it opened yesterday because a witness failed to appear. Mueckenberger, former city coal chief, was fired by the Russians and arrested a month ago. He had insisted on taking four-power orders instead of Russian orders. The Americans have denounced his trial as illegal.

The Soviet-licensed news agency ADN said the Communist-dominated Socialist Unity Party has established a "central control commission" for the party in eastern Germany and smaller controlling units for each district.

The action was taken after a two-day congress in Berlin.

The control commissions apparently are designed to prevent uprising within the party. They are in line with the Communist move to tighten control over party members throughout Europe.

The Soviet-licensed news agency said officials of "a large number" of postoffices in the Russian sector decided yesterday not to handle western-licensed publications any longer on grounds "these papers" want "to throw us all into a new catastrophe."

ism in the minds of the people of the area.

"This scheme worked well, at least until the Cominform's denunciation of the Yugoslav Communist leaders as being, among other things, guilty of nationalism."

The Dutch Foreign Minister's sudden visit and the State Department statement apparently formed part of a pattern which has been developing fast in the last few days. On Wednesday communism was officially decreed a crime in Batavia, Java, while in London Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin charged that there was a Communist conspiracy, led by the Cominform, which aimed at seizing power throughout southeast Asia.

At the Netherlands Embassy and at the State Department, officials declined to discuss the purposes of Stikker's visit in advance of his meeting with Secretary Marshall. Apparently the Netherlands government is anxious to have its countermeasures in Indonesia fully understood and approved here and in London.

Upon his arrival here last night Stikker said communism is "a very serious problem" in Indonesia particularly and adde that he "came here to explain this to Secretary Marshall before he leaves for the United Nations."

Apparently referring to Indonesian demands for independence from Dutch rule, Stikker said:

"The difference between communism and nationalism is coming out, and we must suppress communism."

He said "We believe that there is a plan behind all these things happening in the Far East."

case and that now being investigated here.

The committee will hear some 10 or 12 more witnesses in closed sessions, Thomas said, before spreading the whole atomic energy espionage case upon the public records.

"What we started out to find out we have accomplished," Thomas declared.

Representative John McDowell (R., Pa.) declared that the comment was "an understatement."

Engineer Heard

The committee yesterday heard in executive session Dr. John Hitchcock Chapin, former chemical engineer at the Manhattan atom bomb project.

Thomas described Chaplin's testimony as "of most vital importance to the committee."

He said it had shed a "very illuminating" light on the whole atomic espionage issue.

The committee yesterday also heard from Gerald Morgan, Washington attorney and former member of the congressional legislative counsel, in respect to laws governing witnesses who refused to answer questions on constitutional grounds. Several witnesses have fled to the ground of self-incrimination in recent appearances before the committee.

Ben Gold Admits Communism

Meanwhile, a House Labor subcommittee heard a number of leaders of the Communist-dominated CIO Fur and Leather Workers Union.

Among them was Ben Gold, president of the union, who said he was a Communist and denied his party advocated the overthrow of this Government by force and violence.

Gold said the party is against all war but would "fight to the death" if the United States were attacked. He sidestepped a question, however, about his actions if Russia were the attacker. He termed such an event impossible.

Six other officials of the union were not so frank. Like Sam Burt, a vice president, who testified Wednesday, they refused to answer the "Are you a Communist?" question.

Burt refused to state whether he was a Communist on the grounds the question invaded his constitutional rights and his answer might incriminate him.

Six Are Reticent

Joining him in that stand yesterday were vice presidents Sam Mencher, Joseph Winogradsky and Lyndon Henry; Jack Schneider, business agent for the Furriers' Joint Council; Mrs. Ida Langer, whose husband was killed during strife in the industry in 1933, and George Kleinman, editor of the Fur and Leather Workes' publication.

After running through the entire list, the committee recessed indefinitely without saying whether it will cite the seven reticent witnesses for contempt of Congress.

A committee investigator reported meantime that Nathan Klein, a union member who testified Wednesday against his leaders, telephoned from New York to say he was threatened with the loss of his job this morning by a union official using obscene language.

Gold assured the committee that "Klein's position will be protected" but he described Klein as "an ultra-crazy left-winger" who "wants us to hang the boss . . . whenever he doesn't get what he wants."

Gold is one of the few high union officials who openly admits Communist Party affiliation. He has made no secret of it in the past, and ran true to form yesterday.

Representative Wingate H. Lucas, (D., Tex.) asked him the $64 question.

Gold entered an immediate protest.

"In every civilized country, the Communist Party is a legal party," he said. "Therefore I think it is an infringement of democratic rights to inquire into my political beliefs.

"My political affiliations are a matter of public record. Everyone knows about it. I only protest the asking of the question."

"In spite of my objections, I don't mind telling you I am a member of the Communist Party and have been for over a quarter of a century."

Lucas then asked whether the witness would bear arms in defense of the United States.

Won't Answer on Russia

Gold replied that he would "fight to the death for the defense of America."

"Would you do it against Russia?" demanded Lucas.

Gold got excited.

"Why go to war?" he asked. "We want peace. War is death to our country. I object to bringing Russia into a war discussion."

Lucas persisted: "Would you go to war against Russia?"

"I'd go to war against no nation," Gold shot back. "I hate war."

He made similar replies about a possible war against France or Britain, adding again:

"When this country is attacked I'll give my life."

"But suppose the Russians attack us?" Lucas insisted.

"Impossible," the labor leader cried. "Why should they attack?

"You Texans don't like Russia and you forget the Russians saved thousands of lives of American boys during the war."

Chairman Max Schwabe (R., Mo.) said the committee should be congratulated on having such an intelligent and forthright witness. Then he asked Gold what he would do in the event of a conspiracy to overthrow this Government by force.

"I'll give you my Communist word of honor," the witness replied.

"We Communists will fight to the death against any Fascist conspiracy to overthrow a democratically elected form of government. We are opposed to the use of force and violence."

Earlier Gold said "no one" in his union would "dare" advocate forceful overthrow of the Government. He insisted that the fur workers are "governed and managed on the basis of democracy."

Asked by Lucas how many members are Communists, Gold snapped:

"I don't know. Even if I did, I wouldn't tell you. I wouldn't be a stool pigeon."

DISCUSS AWARD—Frank Carey (left), science writer for the Associated Press, exhibits to Chairman David Lilienthal of the Atomic Energy Commission the George Westinghouse Science Writing Award. Carey received the honor yesterday at a luncheon in the Statler Hotel, at which Lilienthal said the American atomic program is "in a dangerous situation" because of scientists' reluctance to accept Government jobs

Atomic Science Hurt by Probes, Lilienthal Says

acute at the time when specific achievements have just been chalked up to the credit of this country's technical and management forces engaged in atomic energy work—achievements, I may add, that are of importance to every man, woman and child in this country."

Lilienthal said "guards, fences and investigators" are all necessary but that "guards, fences and investigators do not develop new knowledge about atomic energy, nor new applications of that knowledge."

He said there is an "increasing unwillingness" of "specially qualified and very badly needed scientists, engineers and management experts" to accept work with the Government.

Admitting that there is a "variety" of reasons for "reluctance to enter Government work," he blamed the newest on "the risk of undeserved injury to a man's good name, his professional standing and his peace of mind through anonymous villification, through attacks from what may be petty or prejudiced or malevolent sources."

Arlington Newsman Honored

Lilienthal spoke, at his own request, at a science writing award luncheon at which Frank Carey of Arlington, Va., was presented the $1000 Westinghouse award for best newspaper science writing of 1948. Carey is science reporter in the Washington bureau of the Associated Press.

A similar award, for best magazine science writing of the year, was presented to Dr. Florence Moog, assistant professor of zoology at Washington University, St. Louis, for her article, "The Biology of Old Age," which appeared in the June issue of the Scientific American. Companion citations were also given the press association and the magazine.

Carey, who is 39 and lives at 352 N. Edison st., Arlington, won the prize for a four-part series of news accounts on chloromycetin, entitled "Newest Wonder Drug Conquers Dread Scrub Typhus."

Lilienthal's statements brought a reply from Representative John McDowell, Republican, of Pennsylvania, a member of the House Committee on Un-American Activities, which currently is investigating "atomic espionage" and which has caused the names of several scientists recently to be associated with espionage and disloyalty.

"Very bluntly," McDowell said, "I just don't think he is telling the truth. It's a 100 per cent political statement."

Proximity Fuse Idea Found in Brain

Scientists heard further evidence yesterday that man-made wonders are but puny imitations of functions that go on within the human brain.

The highly vaunted proximity fuse which helped win World War II, the wonder of the home thermostat which controls a room's temperature, both operate on principles embodied in the brain, Dr. Hudson Hoagland, physiologist, told assembled scientists here.

Dr. Hoagland, executive director of the Worcester Foundation for Experimental Biology, Shrewsbury, Mass., spoke in a symposium on "Waves and Rhythms," in centenary sessions here of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

But even as he belittled man's achievements he told of studies in which scientists are learning more and more about brain functions. Much of science's latest discoveries was credited by Dr. Hoagland to the electroencephalograph (the machine which records electrical output of the brain) and to coordinating research of mathematicians and physiologists.

For years, said Dr. Hoagland, the brain has been generally regarded as something like a "telephone switchboard." Recent studies, he said, show it to be more than just an ordered mass of some two million connections. It also serves as the "operator," with far more efficiency than automatic telephone systems.

Much of the brain's work, said the speaker, is accompanied by the "negative feed-back," the same principles that make the proximity fuse and the thermostat work. In this process, an action reacts upon itself.

The proximity fuse sends out short radio waves, and as it approaches an object these same waves are echoed back to the fuse (action reacting). Thermostats automatically close and open valves to operate home heating plants by temperature changes.

But the brain, in everyday use, carries on the same principles with a facility unapproached by inventions, Dr. Hoagland said. He estimated the brain has thousands of negative feedback mechanisms.

And then, perhaps to bring man back to size, the speaker told his audience that the wonders of the human brain are still relatively unknown to scientists.

Tuberculosis Survey Held Saving Thousands for D. C.

Dr. A. Barklie Coulter, director of the District Health Department's tuberculosis bureau, said yesterday the recent chest X-ray survey can pay for itself "tenfold"—if an estimated 2000 "minimal" TB cases discovered can be kept from becoming hospital cases.

Dr. Coulter

Dr. Coulter said the survey cost the District $66,000, and "all we had to discover was 22 cases that didn't go to the hospital, to pay for the survey."

"We found more than 2000 such cases," Dr. Coulter told about 80 members of the Junior Board of Commerce, "but because I haven't got enough people to follow them up, a number of them will cost the taxpayers $3600 a year per case."

Compared with that cost for a hospitalized case, it costs his bureau less than $5 to follow along a "minimal" case with home treatment and check-ups, he noted.

His bureau is now following about 6500 people as a result of the survey, instead of the 800 cases being checked before, "but we're less staffed now than we were then," he told the luncheon group at the Burlington Hotel.

'Incompetent' Too

Doctors Hit U. S. Workers As 'Overpaid'

The District Medical Society yesterday editorially viewed Washington as a "mecca of mediocrity" for too many Government workers.

The society also viewed with physicians' alarm President Truman and Vice Presidential Candidate Earl Warren, terming them "political bedfellows" in the matter of socialized medicine.

It picked the Dewey-Warren ticket as best bet, however, in "hopes" that if Dewey is elected President "he will keep his Vice President in line."

Socialized Medicine Feared

Both editorials appeared in the September issue of the society's medical annals, which was distributed yesterday.

Underlying both items was the common fear of socialized or Federal dealings in medicine, vigorously opposed by a large segment of the medical profession.

"It becomes only too clear what the expansion of the bureaucracy which exists in Washington would mean to the public and the medical profession if the Administration's national health program were adopted," said the editorial, directed at "incompetent Federal employes here.

Charges Many Overpaid

As to Federal employes themselves, the item said:

"Not only are too many overpaid for what they do, but a large number are not competent enough to obtain private employment which will assure them of the income they are now receiving . . .

"It is high time that efficiency and sound administration be required in all Government departments, and that needless and incompetent employes be dispensed with."

Moreover, the society said, neither political party can be expected to improve the situation much.

15% Payroll Rise Reported in Virginia

Richmond, Va., Sept. 16 (AP).—The Commonwealth had 25,311 persons on its payroll on July 1—a record figure up 204 from July, 1947, and 700 more than were employed in December of last year, State Personnel Director Harris Hart reported today.

The 25,311 included permanent workers, part-time employes and temporary help in 119 employing agencies. The increase of 204 over July, 1947, was noted despite a drop of 1772 in the highway department.

The payroll amounted, dollar-wise (including perquisities), to $4,200,000 on July 1, up some $600,000—or about 15 per cent—since July, 1947. The increase reflected pay raises granted State workers and general expansion of some agencies.

Virginia's Senator Byrd has been a leader for years in fighting for a reduction in the Federal payroll. Governor Tuck, while ordering mental and tuberculosis hospitals to bring their staffs up to adequate strength, also has inveighed against the big number of governmental employes.

It appeared from the report that 1199 permanent full-time employes were added to the State's payroll between July, 1947, and July, 1948. Of these, 120 were in agencies concerned with conservation and development, 447 in hospitals and institutions, 80 in the division of motor vehicles, 80 in the health department, 75 at William and Mary in Williamsburg, and 121 at VPI.

This increase in the permanent payroll was offset by a cut of 800 in the highway department's permanent workers, and by reductions totaling some 220 in other agencies. The result was a net increase of 272 permanent, full-time employes in the 12-month period.

By setting aside the institutions of higher learning, where abnormal payroll changes have taken place, however, the picture appeared more favorable. Not counting employes in the 13 schools, the State had a payroll of 21,486 persons on July 1, a decrease of 665 from the previous year, and a permanent payroll of 16,466, a decrease of 11 employes from last year.

The report does not reflect any activities of the current program for reorganization of the State government.

Hart's report showed that 22 of the 119 agencies had reduced their payrolls since July, 1947. Twenty-four other agencies had the same number of workers. All others had increased their payrolls, by only a handful in most instances, but by as much as 285 at Virginia Polytechnic Institute and 456 at the University of Virginia.

World Bank Loans Are Made With Care

Two officials of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development last night described it as "a financial institution" which must handle its money with the same care as any other bank.

The officials were Eugene R. Black, executive director for the United States, and Chester A. McLain, general counsel.

McLain, speaking at the semi-annual meeting of the United Nations League of Lawyers, United States Division, in the Army and Navy Club, said the World Bank is for the most part "dependent for its loanable resources on funds which it can borrow in the investment markets of the world.

"In its lending operations it deals with funds of others, funds supplied by its stockholders or by its bondholders. It must deal with those funds as any fiduciary institution should, with due regard for the interests of those whose funds they are.

"That means that its approach to the problems which it meets is different from the approach of other organizations which deal entirely with political or economic problems," McLain said, "a factual difference which is not always appreciated."

Black, who spoke before the Savings Bank Association of Massachusetts at Swampscott, said that "during its 26 months of operation the bank has built a sound financial position.

"Current operations are in the black and they have been for some months," Black said.

He said the deficit accumulated by the bank during its initial year had been eliminated and as of this past June 30 there was "a balance of net income in excess of three million dollars," in addition to a special reserve.

"American attitudes toward foreign borrowers are often characterized by confusion and misunderstanding," and there is a disposition to exaggerate the actual losses from foreign investments which United States investors, in the aggregate, have sustained.

Black said also, "The idea seems to be popular in some places that aid given to some countries for political reasons should take the form of a loan," he said, when there is little chance of repayment.

Dr. H. Milton Colvin, member of the President's loyalty board for the Public Housing Administration, was elected to succeed Dr. Paul F. Douglass as president of the United States Division.

Other newly elected officers included Louis G. Caldwell, first vice president; Col. Julius Peyser, second vice president; Miss Alice Mary Dodd, secretary, and Judge Lucy S. Howorth, treasurer.

Dr. Douglass and Col. Heber H. Rice were elected delegates to the annual conference, and Marguerite Rawalt and Frank C. Sakran, alternates.

Elected to the executive committee were Judge Nadine Lane Gallagher, James E. Palmer, jr., Prof. Hector G. Spaulding, Miriam de Haas and Dr. Phoebe Morrison. Appointed members were Col. Lemuel Bolles, Col. Mary Agnes Brown, Arthur H. Dadian, William N. Morell and Col. Jack Crowley.

Snyder to Honor Mrs. Dawson for Sale of Bonds

Mrs. Thelma Dawson, 3418 S. 14th st., Arlington, Va., who sold more than $800,000 worth of United States savings bonds during the Security Loan campaign will be honored by Secretary of the Treasury John W. Snyder, in ceremonies Friday at St. Paul, Minn.

Mrs. Dawson

Mrs. Dawson is one of five volunteers to be cited by Secretary Snyder for the help they gave to the Savings Bonds program. Because of her outstanding bond-selling record she was chosen to represent the volunteers throughout the country.

Secretary Snyder's speech Friday will end a five-day conference conducted by the savings division of the Treasury to school staff members in techniques best suited for sales promotion of Savings Bonds.

SS General Found Dead

Montgomery Junior College Asks $750,000

A $750,000 bond issue to give Montgomery County Junior College its own buildings and campus instead of sharing facilities with Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School was asked yesterday.

Dean Hugh G. Price of the college said he had forwarded a request for such a bond issue to the county board of education and requested "very serious consideration" of the proposal.

Dean Price said he had urged that the matter be presented by county officials to the Maryland Legislature in time for action at its January session.

He also disclosed that he had requested approval of legislation which would make the institution eligible for increased State funds.

The college, which last year had an enrollment of 385 pupils, received $15,000 from Montgomery County and $10,000 from the State for the current year.

Price said if the present county appropriation is renewed next year and matched by the State, tuition costs for county residents could be reduced from $200 to $125.

Registration which began yesterday will conclude tomorrow and the college will open its doors on Monday. An estimated 450 freshmen and sophomore college students are expected to enroll in classes conducted between 4 and 10 p. m.

The present faculty consists of 20 full-time and 15 part-time instructors.

School Opens After Coal Danger Ends

The Herndon (Va.) School, where 100 tons of coal started burning in the bin, will reopen for classes today.

By working around the clock, a crew of Herndon residents and members of the State Highway Department finally shoveled out the last lump yesterday afternoon.

The floor and walls of the 20-foot-square bin were still warm. But Oscar Costello, Herndon fire chief who supervised the job, said there was no further danger. Costello said that red coals were found nearly to the top of the 8-foot pile in some places.

First evidence of the mysterious fire came Monday when teachers and students in the small building containing the heating plant noticed fumes.

School was closed Wednesday while volunteer firemen with gas masks started moving the coal out in wheelbarrows.

J. H. Rice, assistant superintendent of schools for Fairfax County, estimated damage, including that to the coal, around $500. The coal will be put back into the bin a little at a time when cold weather sets in.

Postmaster Cuts Himself Out of Job

Manila, Sept. 16 (AP).—Postmaster Andres Abella of Cebu had an intricate problem.

He ran out of 1-cent stamps, but he had plenty of 2-cent stamps. The problem was whether to sell 2-cent stamps for one cent or force people who needed only 1-cent stamps to buy 2-cent stamps. Abella solved his problem; he cut the stamps in half. He lost his job.

New Parking Meters Profitable

The Montgomery County treasury was richer yesterday as a result of Silver Spring residents prematurely feeding coins to recently installed parking meters on Georgia ave.

Approximately 175 new meters have been installed. But, according to Commissioner Oliver W. Youngblood, enforcement is not to begin until October 1.

Police officials said they observed numerous motorists putting nickels and pennies in the meters.

Meters are already installed along Georgia ave. between Colesville rd. and the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad underpass, Youngblood said, as well as along most side streets entering the business district.

He said it is planned later to install meters along Georgia ave. north of Colesville rd. and south of the underpass.

Effective hours of the meters will be from 8 a. m. to 6 p. m. except Sundays and national holidays. Stalls marking each meter area will be 22 feet, police said. The fine for a parking violation is $1.

Affront to Envoy Here Protested

The Ethiopian Legation has filed a "formal protest" with the State Department over treatment of Minister Ras H. S. Imru at Constitution Hall last Monday night.

The protest was filed late yesterday by First Secretary Haddis Alemayehou, with Joseph Palmer 2d, acting chief of the African Affairs Division of the State Department.

The protested incident occurred when the Ethiopian Minister appeared at the hall Monday night to attend the opening meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science at its invitation.

Just as President Truman entered the hall to welcome the scientists, an usher was seen to approach Imru and speak to him, following which the diplomat left the hall.

A representative of the Yugoslav Embassy, who saw the interchange, later questioned the usher, who told him a woman had instructed him to ask the Minister to leave the box and take a seat elsewhere.

When the matter was called to the attention of AAAS, the association sent a letter of apology to Minister Imru. The Legation first filed an oral, informal protest with the State Department over the matter, which was met with an informal apology by the department.

Yesterday's formal action followed. State Department officials would not indicate what steps they expect to take.

Identity of the woman who started the whole thing and of the usher who carried out her instructions remained a mystery yesterday.

Fred Hand, manage rof constitution Hall, said the DAR had nothing to do with the action. Constitution Hall audiences are not segregated, he said.

The committee is studying a request for pay increases for nearly 1000 nurses employed in private hospitals here. The request was made by the Graduate Nurses Association.

It was announced that Sister Mary Antonilla, administrator of Georgetown University Hospital, has been elected to the American College of Hospital Administrators. She will be formally installed at an ACHA meeting in Atlantic City next week.

Truman Promises to Continue Rural Electrification Fight

President Truman, in a five-minute, off-the-cuff speech here last night, pledged to continue his fight for rural electrification "as long as I am President."

Mr. Truman, on eve of his departure for Des Moines to open his Western campaign trip, "dropped in" briefly on a regional dinner at the Washington Hotel of 250 directors and managers of rural electric cooperatives.

He said confidently he had "some reason to believe" his tenure as President "will be continued for some time after January 20."

"I remember the terrific fight to prevent passage of the rural electrification law," the President told his listeners from nine Eastern Seaboard States.

He urged them to continue their "active expansion" to bring to every farm the tools and gadgets "to make life on the farm as attractive as it is in the city."

Referring to his trip to Des Moines where he will speak Saturday at a national plowing contest, the President recalled for his listeners, who are here for a two-day meeting of Region One of the National Rural Electric Cooperative Association, his own farm days.

He drew chuckles when he said he had told officials of the plowing contest that if they had any mules there, "I might try to plow a straight furrow myself." He added quickly: "I haven't had any experience with tractors."

The regional electric cooperative meeting, with representatives 58 cooperative systems from nine seaboard States from Maine to North Carolina, will end this afternoon.

During the day, Executive Manager Clyde T. Ellis of the National Rural Electric Cooperative Association, warned members that private utilities have launched an all-out battle against the rural electric cooperatives.

Dinner, Shows Set For Air Force Day

Secretary of Defense James Forrestal will head the Nation's weekend observance of Air Force Day, Saturday, addressing a dinner at the Statler Hotel at 7:45 tonight. The dinner is sponsored by the Air Force Association and Aero Club of Washington.

Saturday, Andrews and Bolling Air Bases will hold public demonstrations of Air Force might.

Andrews Air Base will open its gates to the public at 10 a. m. with ground displays scheduled until 2 p. m. when flight demonstrations take over. The weather station, maintenance hangars, mess halls and base theater will be open for inspection.

At Bolling Air Base the program starts at 11 a. m. with the accent on atomic-age equipment. A radio-controlled Flying Fortress will fly in from Florida, landing around noon. Numerous guided missiles will be on display.

In demonstrations, paratroopers will invade the field and firefighters will extinguish aircraft fires with a squadron of "Shooting Stars" in jet-assisted take-offs providing a final salute to the program.

National Guard Day Observance Scheduled

National Guard Day will be celebrated by the District Guard with a ball at the Armory Saturday night and through participation by Air Guard units in Andrews Air Base "action" earlier in the day in conjunction with Air Force Day observances.

Yesterday, the eighth anniversary of the National Guard's entry to active duty, was officially designated by President Truman as National Guard Day but as it fell during the week observance was postponed until Saturday.

Fighter pilots of the 121st Squadron of the Air Guard will intercept "enemy" B-25s over Andrews Air Base Saturday. The 113th Aircraft Warning Battalion will pick up the "enemy" on its radar scopes and F-47s will attack.

Fund for Slain Officer's Wife Reaches $1700

Contributions for Mrs. Robert B. Harris, widow of the Alexandria policeman shot to death while on duty last Saturday, yesterday reached $1700.

Among the $400 in gifts received yesterday, according to Maj. Edgar Sims, was $20 from John L. Lewis, boss of the Nation's coal miners.

Detective Inspector Russell A. Hawes, of the Alexandria police, said that $500 subscribed by the Alexandria Police Association and $500 subscribed by two merchants yesterday brought to $1700 the total reward offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the man who shot Harris as the officer was checking the rear of the Howard Johnson restaurant at N. Washington and Montgomery sts.

Police, meantime, reported no progress toward cracking the case. Detective Hawes said that after questioning about 50 men, police last night still were holding only two suspects.

One of these, Hawes said, has been placed in the vicinity of the restaurant about the time of the shooting.

The other, according to Detective Sergt. Russell S. Greenwalt, has confessed to a housebreaking the night of the murder, and to nine larcenies over a two-month period. Three were in Arlington and two in Fairfax, police said.

Greenwalt identified the man as James J. E. Davis, 20, of 2118 F st. nw. Davis offered one housebreaking as an alibi, saying that he was busy breaking into a filling station when the shooting occurred, the detective said.

Davis was charged last night with the five housebreakings that occurred in Alexandria. He will appear in Alexandria Police Court today for preliminary hearing.

Dance Starts Political Row In Arlington

Differences about attending a dance led to an argument and threatened court fight yesterday between Arlington County Board Chairman Daniel A. Dugan and an independent board candidate.

The independent candidate, retired carpenter Jacob Betchel of 604 S. Carlyn Springs rd., had charged in a letter to the press that Dugan "failed to participate" in an important county board meeting last Friday.

Instead, according to Bechtel, Dugan "considered his social obligations more important" and attended a dance. Bechtel said Dugan should attend all such meetings "or resign from the board."

Chairman Dugan, who is not up for reelection this November, said he had attended the meeting and remained until "the principal purpose of the meeting was accomplished." Then, he said, he went to the dance.

Dugan pointed out that he had missed one county board meeting in the two years he had served on the board, and that the absence was due to illness.

He threatened to present Bechtel's press release to the October session of the Arlington grand jury for possible action under Section 4427-A of the Virginia Code "unless Bechtel retracts his statement."

That section of the code lists as guilty of a misdemeanor any person who "knowingly or wilfully" gives to a newspaper any "false or untrue statement concerning any person."

Hyattsville Enjoined on Parking Meters

Hyattsville City Council was served with a second temporary injunction last night to restrain the city from installing parking meters.

Yesterday's injunction suit was filed by a group of Hyattsville merchants through Attorneys Harvey G. Machen and J. Edward Hutchinson of Hyattsville. It contends that the motion ordering installation of the meters is void because it conflicts with State laws and will "increase the burden of your plaintiffs and all the taxpayers."

The petition further contends that the council is required to complete its annual levy by June 30 and that any additional levy conflicts with the city charter and that the ordinance is in violation of the State law requiring that motor vehicle laws "be uniform and Statewide."

The injunction was granted in Prince Georges County Circuit Court by Judge Charles C. Marbury who required that the plaintiffs post $1000 bond to protect the town against possible damages. The plaintiffs were listed as Ralph Dudrow, L. W. Carr, John T. Norman, Dr. Aaron Deitz, Daniel J. Burke, Irvine Billhimer and James D. Coates, all Hyattsville business and professional men.

An injunction was granted Wednesday by the same judge to Newton Properties, Inc., owners of the Queens Chapel Shopping Center, which contended through Attorney T. Hammond Welsh, jr., that the meters were being installed upon private property in that the sidewalks in front of the shopping center never had been dedicated.

Mayor Caesar L. Aiello said that the properties company had written the city a letter offering the sidewalks as public property and that the city had written in reply accepting the proffer. No formal plat has been filed, Mayor Aiello said, but it is his opinion that the letters serve as legal dedication to the city.

Merchants of the city have been fighting against parking meters for six years.

Meanwhile, no action is planned by the council until Monday night when it will hold a regular meeting.

Savannah Picks Ex-D. C. Newsman For Sheriff Post

William C. Harris, a former copyreader for The Washington Post, has won the Democratic primary nomination for sheriff of Chatham County, Georgia. The county includes Savannah. Nomination is tantamount to election.

Harris was secretary to Hugh Peterson for eight years when the latter was representative from Georgia. The sheriff-nominee left The Washington Post to serve as a Marine Corps combat correspondent during the war.

Compromise On Pay Averts Phone Strike

A Nation-wide strike of 25,000 telephone workers, including some 450 in the Washington metropolitan area, was averted yesterday by a compromise wage settlement. The walkout was scheduled for 6 a. m. today.

Management and union representatives of the Western Electric Co., manufacturing subsidiary of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., agreed on a variable pay rise of from 3 to 15 cents an hour in negotiations in New York.

Last night members of the Washington division of Local 96, Association of Communication Equipment Workers (CIO), tore up dozens of picket placards and instead voted, 263 to 112, at Pythian Temple, to accept the wage offer. They had planned to picket all Washington central offices beginning this morning.

Still Must Be Ratified

George Lawler, business agent for the local here, said most area workers would receive a 12-cents-hourly wage hike. The agreement still must be ratified by other locals; a union spokesman predicted this would take three weeks.

The ACEW negotiated for workers in 43 States and the District of Columbia. The CIO American Union of Telephone Workers, representing long distance operators, still is in negotiations, however.

The two principal Washington unions, affilated with the Communications Workers of America (Ind.) are scheduled to resume wage talks with the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. here early next week. They represent about 6000 workers, including operators, maintenance crews and clerical employes.

The local workers who won wage increases yesterday are installers of large central office equipment.

Asked 31-Cent Boost

An ACEW spokesman said yesterday's agreement in New York would mean an average raise of 11 cents an hour, or $4.40 a week; previous wages, he said, averaged $1.15 an hour, or $46 a week. The union originally had sought a 31-cents-an-hour increase, then scaled down its demands to an increase of from 11 to 16 cents an hour.

Ernest Weaver, national president of ACEW, said the union "is not satisfied with the proposal" but "a strike is not worthwhile at this time." He anticipated little "difficulty" in obtaining ratification.

Weaver said the new contract extends to November 30, 1950, but that it provides for a reopening on wages any time after September 15, 1949. Federal Mediator Thomas R. Steutel presided at the union-management conference at which the agreement was reached.

ABC Board Refuses to Act On 'C' License

The Alcoholic Beverage Control Board reserved decision yesterday as to whether an applicant even had the right to apply for a Class "C" license.

The application was filed by Peter Robbins, proprietor of a restaurant at 4469 Connecticut ave. nw. A hearing on the application was held yesterday.

After the hearing, Mrs. Agnes K. Mason, a member of the ABC Board, said she didn't think Robbins was entitled to a hearing. She cited an ABC law that provides no application for a liquor license may be filed if one filed by any other applicant in the same neighborhood in the previous four years had been rejected.

An application for a Class "C" license in the same neighborhood was turned down on March 28, 1946. Mrs. Mason said District officials will decide whether the application should be withdrawn.

Noise Drives Us All Crazy, Maestro Says

Baltimore, Sept. 16 (AP).—Reginald Stewart, conductor of the Baltimore Symphony Orchestra and qualified thereby as one of the defter producers of sound, said today that noise is driving the whole country crazy.

"Americans like noise, he said. "It gets worse every year. I think we'll all end up in mental homes."

Stewart passed his judgment upon returning from a brief vacation on Cape Cod.

"I expected," he said, "that the seaside would be quiet. But, no. Even there, the radio.

"And don't think you're safe in the water. A blimp comes along with blaring loudspeakers to remind you the Red Sox are playing in their stadium. More noise.

"You jump in a taxi and are regaled with a two-way radio conversation. Everywhere juke box Romeos shout sweet nothings to their Juliets.

"A man pushing a carriage with a sleeping baby on a quiet Sunday morning carries a radio, playing loudly.

"In night clubs, people yell their heads off trying to drown out the band, with the band in the fearful position of being able to turn up the amplifier.

"There is boom, crash, bang everywhere in America. Where can you go to be quiet now?"

Stewart said his complaint isn't against modern music.

"I wouldn't mind it," he continued, "but people don't listen to it. It's all just a background of noise, and I think it's a very bad habit for the United States."

Stewart is a native of Scotland and came here in 1941 after several years in Toronto. He became an American citizen last year.

Dock Work Offered Company in 'Truce'

San Francisco, Sept. 16 (AP).—A Seattle stevedoring firm which has made a separate peace with striking CIO longshoremen said it was offered contracts today to load all Army cargoes in San Francisco and Seattle.

The firm, Griffiths & Sprague, told San Francisco newsmen tonight it has not decided whether to accept.

The Army, meanwhile, confirmed reports it has begun to load cargo with its own civil service employes, hired despite longshore picketing this week at the Army employment offices. Two Army transports were being worked at the Oakland Army Base today. No troops were being used. The Army also announced transfer of all such longshore hiring to Oakland; no more will be done at Fort Mason here.

CIO President Philip Murray today urged the Army to use just such companies as Griffiths & Sprague rather than hire its own nonunion stevedores.

The CIO International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union said yesterday it had signed a satisfactory contract with Griffiths & Sprague. Although the contract calls for a 15-cent pay hike, longshoremen will work for the firm on Army jobs at prestrike wages, the union announced.

Most other companies are members of the Waterfront Employers Association, which has refused to handle Army cargoes if it meant dealing with CIO longshoremen whose leaders have not signed Taft-Hartley Act anticommunism affidavits.

Pickets continued to patrol the gates of Fort Mason, and the Army hiring hall in Oakland, where the Army was waiting to sign up more workers.

There were also reports on the waterfront here that Secretary of the Army Kenneth C. Royall and officers of the Army Transportation Corps would fly here Friday to survey the situation.

Longshoremen and other maritime unions have been out since September 2, in a dispute that began over wages and control of the union-operated "hiring halls" by which men are assigned jobs.

The walkout of 20,000 members of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union (CIO), headed by Harry Bridges, began September 3. The strike was called for higher wages and to force retention of the union hiring hall.

Bridges has accused the Army of "strikebreaking" by hiring men through its own offices instead of the union's hiring halls.

Murray told Royal, that the Army's attempt to hire workers outside of the union hiring hall is "a complete departure from long established Army practice and the American tradition of Army neutrality in labor disputes."

San Francisco, Sept. 16 (AP). Harry Bridges' striking CIO longshoremen made a new offer today to Army Secretary Royall, who has threatened to use troops, if need be, to get Army cargo moving.

The new offer—to work at prestrike rates through a Seattle stevedoring company with which the longshoremen have a new contract—was called for higher wages and to force retention of the union hiring hall.

The union today increased its pickets around the Army's port of embarkation at Seattle in protest against the Army attempt to hire dock workers at the pier instead of through a union hiring hall.

Another 500 made their initial appearance today at Army dock facilities in Oakland.

Other throngs of pickets were active for the third day in San Francisco.

Talks Replace Violence In Oil Workers' Strike

Richmond, Calif., Sept. 16 (AP).—Negotiations replaced tear gas and stone throwing today in the stormy CIO Oil Refinery Workers strike.

Mayor R. H. Miller announced that representatives of the striking CIO union and two nonstriking unions had agreed to extend indefinitly a "truce" that halted fighting around the big Richmond Standard Oil Co. refinery.

Across the bay in San Francisco the union and Standard said contract talks were resumed.

Missing Cadet Discovered Here

JACK MURDOCK
"Wanted to find himself"

* * * * * *

Son Rejoins Parents Here

brought him to Washington and the dramatic reunion. His red-haired mother had been almost prostrate during his disappearance, which drew Nationwide attention.

"I just wanted to see things and do things," the slender lad explained as he waited anxiously for the reunion with his parents at 1749 Pennsylvania ave. nw. "I wanted to find myself."

"I saw everything I wanted to see and did everything I wanted to do," he said, admitting that "the sinful part" of his wanderlust was his failure to finish his junior year at Fork Union.

"Two of my buddies and I just pulled out one day and hitch-hiked to Savannah," he said. After that, Jack became separated from his mates, whose funds ran out, and let his urge to travel run rampant.

Picked Up Odd Jobs

It took him over half the United States and eventually to Ireland on a cattle boat. When his money ran out, Jack picked up odd jobs as "busboy, pinboy, short order man" and scraped enough together to take him farther.

"I knew the theater business inside and out," he related, since his father is a theater manager in Uniontown, "so I never had to worry about getting a job."

He said he hadn't realized how worried his parents were until he read newspaper stories telling of his disappearance. Private detectives had searched the country fruitlessly, and the FBI lent a hand unofficially.

Last night's reunion was the result of quick thinking and insistent persuasion by Mrs. Sarah Feltner, chief operator at the Sheraton Hotel and a friend of the Murdocks.

Jack had blown into town on a bus shortly after noon and telephoned the Sheraton to speak to his aunt, Mrs. Ina Pumphrey, who also works there.

Aunt Called His Mother

That was enough of a hint that homesickness might have gripped a man even old enough to sport a mustache, which Jack was wearing last night.

"When I talked with him," Mrs. Feltner said, "I told him to stay right here and not go to New Orleans, as he said he planned to do. Then I got on the telephone and called his mother."

Mrs. Murdock, who had kept a hopeful vigil for her wandering son for a year and a half, wasn't home when the long-awaited call arrived.

She returned from a shopping trip and heard the news. She screamed with joy, and then said quietly:

"Thank God, I dusted his room this morning.

She and Jack's dad made the trip by car from Uniontown in five hours. Mr. Murdock regained his composure long enough to say, "This is all we wanted."

As for Jack, he said, "The next place I'm going is home with you, Mom," and hugged his mother.

Unions Split Over Steam Board Post

Differences between union locals over who should fill a vacancy on the three-man District Board of Examiners for steam and opearting engineers were taken under advisement yesterday by the District Commissioners.

Representatives of Locals 77 and 99, of the International Union of Operating Engineers (AFL), appeared before the Commissioners to urge the selection of a representative on the board from their membership.

Jesse N. West, business agent for Local 99, suggested several possibilities, among them: William D. Haan, president of Local 99; Frank J. Nesline, member of Local 99, and Harold A. Johnson, recording secretary of Local 99.

Local 102, of the same union, however, opposed the nominees and offered support for Harley G. Sanders, present member of the board who is up for reappointment.

Story in Post Brings Scout Letter From Filipino Youth

The common bond of scouting has brought two boys together, even though they are 9000 miles apart.

Marapao

A Garrett Park, Md., Boy Scout, Alan N. Buck, 15, of 16 Montrose ave., told yesterday of receiving a letter from a Filipino Boy Scout, Ben P. Marapao, of Calape, Bohol.

Alan, a Washington Post carrier for two years and a sophomore at Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School, said Ben had seen his name in the June 13 anniversary section of The Washington Post. The issue carried a feature story about Buck.

The new Filipino friend said he had attended college, but was out of school now "due to a financial breakdown."

"I'm a Boy Scout myself," he wrote, "and, in fact, my knowing you are a Boy Scout gives me the inspiration of this letter."

The Filipino added: "Scouting is really a fun, I know, but much to my regret, my dear friend, we lack the things we ought to have. All we have to do is squabble over one copy of an old, old handbook in the library."

Alan, who is the son of Clarence L. Buck, a chemist at the Government Printing Office, said yesterday he planned to answer soon and send Ben a Scout handbook for his own use.

"I'm going to tell him all about Scouting here and school, and my two-day camping trip to Great Falls on my motor scooter," he said.

New Income Tax Guide Prepared

The Bureau of Internal Revenue made public yesterday a new and comprehensive guide to the preparation of income tax returns under the new tax law which became effective last April 2 and affects income for current calendar year 1948.

The new instructions are in a 16-page pamphlet replacing the four-page leaflet on which the taxpayers have relied for income tax guidance for the last several years. The new publication is the most extensive of its kind.

The pamphlet will be available to the taxpayers upon request at offices of the Collectors of Internal Revenue about January 1.

Orville Wright Estate Valued at Million Dollars

Dayton, Ohio, Sept 16 (U.P.)—Probate Court records revealed today that Orville Wright, co-inventor of the airplane, left an estate valued at $1,023,903.

The "Kitty Hawk" plane in which Wright and his brother, Wilbur, staged a successful flight at Kitty Hawk, N. C., nearly 45 years ago, was valued in the inventory at $1. It is to be returned soon from the Kensington museum in London, to the Smithsonian Institution in Washington.

The Wright estate had a gross value of $1,023,903 for tax purposes. Of this, Federal taxes will take $164,970, and the State $26,672. Wright died last June 30.

Tax exempt bequests included one gift of $309,000 to Oberlin (Ohio) College and another of $40,000 to Earlham (Indiana) College.

Senate Unit to Probe Textron

By The Associated Press

Senator Bridges (R., N. H.) said last night the Senate Small Business Committee is going to inquire into the decision of Textron, Inc., to close mills in six places in New England and Virginia.

Bridges said in a statement that he flew here yesterday to arrange for an investigation and that Chairman Wherry (R., Nebr.) of the Small Business Committee "agreed to inquire into the circumstances surrounding the announcement of Textron, Inc., of the closing of its mills in Nashua and Dover, N. H., Manville and Esmond, R. I., Taunton, Mass., and Waynesboro, Va."

Wherry's committee, Bridges said, "is interested in establishing the damage to smaller industries and businesses in those communities and the effect on employment as a result of the closing of these plants."

Textron announced Tuesday, Bridges said, it would close its plants that he listed as soon as present orders were filled. They employ 9000 persons, he said, adding it was understood the firm would move to Puerto Rico.

Committee investigators will be sent immediately to the cities where the mills are located, Bridges said, "with a view to preparing for public hearings at which all interested parties will be heard."

He said he wanted to "find out how Puerto Rico, where Americans have been pouring tax dollars for years, can lure industries away from this country."

Daoust charged that Textron "has destroyed the livelihood of 10,000 textile workers—about all of them in New England—within the last few months."

In a letter to the New Hampshire congressional delegation, Daoust said the proposed probe should study "how and why certain Government units in Puerto Rico have extended subsidies and other inducements to Textron to establish operations in this United States territory."

Tenants' Rent Plea Denied

Rent Control Administrator Robert F. Cogswell yesterday turned thumbs down on a request from the Brentwood Village Tenants League that he seek a probe of the development's operational practices.

The league, which claims to represent more than 400 tenants, on September 10 charged owners of the huge project in Northeast Washington with "willful violation" of rent control regulations.

A letter just sent to Armand L. Ratte, president of the league, advised him that "in view of all of the surrounding acts and circumstances, and particularly the immediate offer of the management to promptly refund rents in every case where an error has been discovered," there is not "at the present time any necessity of referring the matter to the Corporation Counsel for possible criminal action."

The letter, dated September 15, was written by Ernest F. Williams, general counsel for the Rent Control Administration, on request of Congswell.

Plan to Junk Plane Parts By WAA Brings Complaints

lion dollars, much in fairly good shape.

The Pratt & Whitney parts are for the R-1830-92 engine, used in the Douglas DC-3 transport, still in use on the world airlines. The engine also is used in several Air Force and Navy trainers and some wartime combat types now in storage. Many of the spare parts are interchangeable and are used in later model Pratt & Whitney engines powering the Douglas DC-4 and DC-6 airliners.

WAA Position Outlined

Here is the War Assets Administration position in the matter, as outlined by Minnich:

1. Congress, by the act of June 30, 1948, ordered WAA to liquidate by next February 28 and turn over all aircraft and aircraft parts then still in its possession to the Air Force.

2. The Air Force and Navy have screened WAA engine parts on hand and taken over a sufficient store for their future needs. The Air Force has instructed the WAA to dispose of everything it cannot sell rather than turn over the balance to them. The USAF also wants WAA to melt down the surplus to provide scrap metal rather than put it back on the market.

3. WAA has given its authorized dealers, who have actual possession of the parts, until October 1 to put firms bids for purchase of some of the equipment. WAA officials hope that about a sixth of the supply will be bought—parts costing from 20 to 30 millions originally. The rest then will be melted down for scrap.

4. Minnick declared the WAA estimates that this quantity is all that will be needed by existing Pratt & Whitney engines during the remainder of their life. The other five sixths, he states, represents an oversupply ordered by the Army Air Force and Navy during the war.

5. If the dealers do not agree to purchase this amount for resale as parts, the whole quantity will be put up for sale at public auction. In such case, Minnich admits, the junk dealers will buy it in at about 2 cents on the dollar, instead of the 30 per cent price offered the dealers.

Financing a Factor

Representatives of the authorized WAA dealers, in their complaint to the Senate committee, contend that they cannot finance the immediate purchase of the stocks. If this is so, then the whole lot will be sold to the junk dealers.

As the domestic and foreign airlines cannot risk buying spare parts from the "junkers," most or all of the supply will be melted down, Minnich said.

He admitted that there was risk of this happening under the WAA plan—loss of the required supply of spare parts, but expressed confidence that the authorized dealers would be able to find the money to buy that part of the stockpile which WAA estimates will be required.

The only alternative to this course, said Minnich, is for the Government to continue to hold the engine parts, indefinitely, which, says he, will take congressional action.

Foreign Airlines Interested

Several of the foreign airlines have expressed interest in buying up stocks of the engine parts at rates averaging about 50 cents on the original dollar cost. But they lack dollar credits and would like to continue buying them as they need them.

The Deputy WAA Administrator said the Pratt & Whitney division of United Aircraft and other engine and airplane manufacturers as well as the Air Forces had expressed approval of the WAA plan for disposal of the engine stocks.

At least one of the American air transport companies, however, has joined in the complaint to Congress of the proposed scrapping of the parts.

They are asking the Ferguson committee for an immediate "hold-off" order, to prevent any of the equipment being scrapped after October 1 until Congress investigates the entire matter.

Dean Alfange Backs Dewey

peace would be better served by his election."

The Liberal Party, which split away from the American Labor Party in 1944, is still supporting Mr. Truman for the presidency, but Alfange retained his membership on the executive committee of the group.

Wants 'Liberal Movement'

His switch to Dewey followed long talks with Adolph Berle, chairman of the Liberal Party, and David Dubinsky, first vice chairman. They failed to persuade him to stick with Mr. Truman.

Following a conference with Governor Dewey, Alfange told reporters:

"I differ with Governor Dewey on quite a few things but the top value now is to get an honest liberal movement started on a national level."

His announcement that he will not only support but speak for Dewey augmented the increasingly liberal pattern of the men around Dewey in this campaign. There was some reason to believe it was discomforting news to old guard elements who to date haven't played a really major role in the campaign.

The extreme conservative wing of the GOP wasn't being overlooked by the Governor, however. In fact, he had lunch today with Senator Edward Martin (R., Pa.), the man whose Pennsylvania delegation started the Philadelphia stampede to Dewey and who later placed his name in nomination.

Concerned for Senate

Martin later stressed increasing Republican concern over holding control of the Senate. The Pennsylvanian, who has recently been in West Virginia and other Senate-race States, described the fight for retaining a Republican margin in the Senate as "very close."

For the second time in three days Dewey also conferred with the leader of a major farm organization, this time Albert S. Goss, master of the National Grange. Like Allan B. Kline, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation who talked to Dewey Tuesday, Goss made no political commitment. Their farm groups are nonpartisan.

Goss proposed "three lines of defense" against any recurrence of the 1920 collapse of farm prices. His No. 1 proposal called for a board, appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate, to gather facts to push the marketing of commodities in long supply and hold back those in short supply. Goss said Dewey made no definite commitment but told him his program "makes sense to me."

But Alfange was Albany's surprise visitor, although the news of his switch was broken to Dewey a week ago by Senator Irving M. Ives, a Hamilton College schoolmate of Alfange. Dewey himself was a classmate of the Liberal Party leader at Columbia University law school.

As the American Labor candidate, Alfange ran against Dewey for Governor in 1942, rolling up 406,626 votes to 2,148,000 for Dewey and 1.5 million for John J. Bennett, the Farley-picked Democratic compromise.

Alfange said his goal then was a Nation-wide liberal party "free of the Communist stigma" but that now seems hopeless.

He said the Wallace movement is not a third party but a "fifth column" engineered by men of "notoriously Communist antecedents and moored to Soviet foreign policy."

He said he saw no hope of his own Liberal Party attaining a national status in his lifetime and that liberals in the major parties are unwilling to participate in a political realignment. He cited Americans for Democratic Action as a case in point.

Alfange concluded that the practical liberal "must therefore work with the tools that are available."

Holding the Democratic Party incapable of united action on a national level, he called it a party of "irreconcilable sectionalism."

He said the Republican Party is handicapped by reactionary and isolationist elements, but can overcome these. Voicing a high praise for President Truman, he said he had no chance of unifying his party for sustained liberalism.

"Governor Dewey, on the other hand, could unite his party and restore it to its early tradition as the champion of civil liberty and equal opportunity," he said.

"His major contribution to our bipartisan foreign policy and his courageous support of the Ives-Quinn bill (New York's FEPC law), in opposition to the big moneyed interests, convince me that he will veer his party toward a truly liberal direction.

"What he needs to support him is an overwhelming popular mandate and full and honest support of every open-minded American liberal."

Alfange, 53-year-old lawyer-author, of Greek parentage, ran for Congress on the Democratic ticket in 1941 in New York's Seventeenth (Silk Stocking) district. He was defeated by Joseph Clark Baldwin, Republican. He is a Phi Beta Kappa, veteran of World War I, and his book, "The Supreme Court and the National Will," published in 1937, won the Theodore Roosevelt Memorial Award for the best non-fiction book of the year.

Fears for Senate

Conferring with Governor Dewey on this campaign's really No. 1 objective, a Republican Senate, Senator Martin told reporters Senator Chapman Revercomb (R.) faces "a hard fight" in West Virginia. He said Republicans will have a difficult time electing their Senate candidates in these States: Kentucky, Oklahoma, Wyoming, Minnesota, Iowa, Idaho, Montana and Tennessee.

Saying a Democratic Senate would hold a "veto" over Mr. Dewey in the White House, Martin stressed:

"It would be the most unfortunate thing that could ever happen in America if the Senate and House were not in accord with Governor Dewey as President."

Martin said he did not discuss the tariff with the Governor. The high tariff Pennsylvanian denied he is opposed to the reciprocal trade "principle," but said persons familiar with the Nation's "industrial requirements" should have a voice in the program.

"Reciprocal trade is a two-way street," he said. "This crowd down in Washington thinks it's a one-way street."

NLRB Order Restrains Harrisonburg Firm

The National Labor Relations Board yesterday ordered a Harrisonburg, Va., firm to restrain from interfering with the collective bargaining of its employes and to reinstate three discharged workers.

The NLRB order was directed against the Imperial Ice Cream Co., division of Fairmont Foods Co., Harrisonburg. The NLRB ordered the reinstatement of Jean Funkhouser, Lucille V. Carter and Tyson Kyger, with reimbursement in specified sums for loss of wages.

Meat Prices Rising Again After Decline

Food prices, after declining for several weeks, are heading upward again.

The upturn is particularly noticeable in beef, pork, lamb and veal, with one local, independent super market operator reporting increases of as much as 10 to 12 cents a pound for certain items because of rising wholesale costs.

The Associated Press food index, for which 1926 equals 100, has risen to 193 from 191.50 a week ago, with the livestock index moving from 258 to 260.

The Dun & Bradstreet index has climbed from $6.86 for one pound each of 31 foods in general use to $6.95 this week. The index hit a peak of $7.36 July 13 and then gradually declined until a week ago.

Price rises are generally attributed to the law of supply and demand—more demand for solid foods as the children start back to school, cooler weather stimulating appetites and families settling to their regular pattern of living and eating after vacations.

Local price samplings of items of comparable quality showed that at an independent super market porterhouse steak had gone from 98 cents last week to $1.10, chuck roast from 65 to 75 cents, round steak, 98 to $1.10 a pound. The store made no marked change in its pork or veal prices, however.

The following changes were noted at a chain store: Commercial grade chuck roast, 63 to 65 cents; sausage meat, 51 to 55 cents; and all-pork sausage links, 65 to 69 cents.

At another chain store, fresh ground beef rose from 63 to 65 cents per pound and shoulder lamb roast from 57 to 59 cents. There was no change in brand sausage meat, frankfurters, smoked hams or sliced bacon.

Poultry prices generally showed little or no change. Butter and margerine are about the same this weekend, though the wholesale price of butter is inching upward.

Produce prices are slightly higher since the hot spell, though the rise is not particularly noticeable at the retail level. The rise is considered the normal fall trend.

Cantaloupes are a little cheaper, perhaps because of lighter demand, and Florida grapefruit—three to four weeks early—is a little lower than might be expected because it is in competition with other fruits still in the market.

Truman Acts To Protect Draftee Morals

President Truman today directed the armed services to cooperate with local civilian committees to safeguard the moral and religious welfare of young men inducted under the peacetime draft.

He approved recommendations made by the advisory commission on universal training, and directed the Secretary of Defense to carry out as many of them as practicable.

The commission recommended local communities near training camps set up, personal counsel entertainment, religious and public relations committees to cooperate with military authorities.

The commission also recommended that:

(1) Bars and taverns be asked not to sell alcoholic beverages to draftees under 20 years of age.

(2) Draftees under 20 be forbidden to register at hotels or tourist courts and be permitted to stay only in service clubs or approved homes when they spend the night away from camps.

(3) Wartime campaigns against prostitution and venereal diseases be revived. In this connection, the commission said, local committees "should work with the services in insuring the success of our new, though old approach to sex which is based on continence and self-discipline, rather than prophylaxis."

President Truman said local communities will be invited to start planning now for resumption of wartime social welfare and religious activities for benefit of members of the armed forces during off-duty hours.

Registration End In Sight for District

Registration for the peacetime draft will wind up today and Saturday as men born in 1930 before September 19 sign up for military service.

With the end of registration in sight, Frank D. Norton, deputy District draft director, yesterday announced that local Selective Service headquarters has already received 48,109 registration cards.

Norton said that draft headquarters has mailed out 3304 questionnaires as of yesterday. He also disclosed that Draft Board No. 3 plans its first classification meeting Monday night.

Boards 1 and 2 already have met. Remainder of the District's 15 boards are now arranging their initial meetings throughout next week, Norton said. Most meetings, he added, will be held at night.

The District has received a quota of 55 men to be inducted in November. Draft officials, who have predicted that slightly more than 50,000 men will register here, The 55-man November quota, however, will be filled by 24- and 25-year-old men, according to Norton.

Board No. 1 classified 14 Washington men 1-A at their meeting Tuesday. Wednesday, as Board No. 2 met, 13 men were classified 1-A. Mrs. Marcella Dalton, chief clerk, said. They are:

Daniel M. O'Donoghue, 1427 Foxhall rd. nw., lawyer; Norman J. Cunningham, 3018 Porter st. nw., grocery clerk; Aurello B. Collado, 3115 Quesada st. nw., salesman; Clint Aikens, 3720 Upton st. nw., houseman.

Aggravated Assault

It is not exactly good news that Washington led all cities in the country in the number of cases of aggravated assault reported to police during the first six months of 1948. The fact that the number of such cases has increased to 1867 from 1025 during the same period last year is not in itself so startling as it may seem at first. Since aggravated assaults include all cases in which a weapon of any kind is used, the figure of 1867 does not mean that there were that many serious injuries. Moreover, the system of crime recording was changed last summer to include every report, no matter how trivial. This temporarily may have the effect of placing Washington in an unenviable position with respect to other cities. But assuredly an accurate reporting system is the first step in better crime prevention.

Even discounting the apparent increase due to the new reporting system, however, the number of crimes is sufficient to cause municipal concern. Detroit, the second worst offender and a city approximately twice the population of Washington, had only 1581 aggravated assaults. Moreover, in robberies, burglaries and larcenies the local record was out of proportion to Washington's rank in population. Whether the totals indicate that Washingtonians are more lawless than residents of other cities or that police protection is less efficient here is open to question. Doubtless there are many factors, such as location and the number of transients, which make strict comparisons with other areas unfair. But certainly the FBI report is a strong indorsement of the plan approved by Congress to add 200 policemen to the District force. The mere presence of more police on the streets and the knowledge that they are available will in themselves be deterrents to crime. To this end the recruitment of the additional officers ought to be expedited in every possible way.

Larger Cabinet

Former President Hoover, in his speech before the National Press Club Tuesday, hit on one of the principal reasons why the job of the Chief Executive is a task calling virually for a superman. In addition to the 10 Cabinet departments, from 60 to 80 independent agencies report directly to the President. To be sure, these agencies vary greatly in importance. But if the President were to give each of the Cabinet departments and only the more important independent agencies one hour a week of his time, it is plain that he would have no time left to concentrate on high policy-making. Obviously the President cannot have more than a hazy idea of what goes on in many of these agencies. As a practical matter, some of them receive only the rather shadowy supervision of the Bureau of the Budget.

The administrative monstrosity thus built up is not new. It had its beginning in the Administration of Theodore Roosevelt. But it is a burden that requires relief now that there are so many matters of state requiring the President's attention. Mr. Hoover's solution is more "working Vice Presidents"—in other words, a larger Cabinet. This solution also is not new, but it has more in its favor now than ever before, and is doubtless one of the suggestions of the Commission on Organization of the Executive Branch of the Government, of which Mr. Hoover is chairman. The commission has been given unique powers by Congress to survey Government administration and recommend changes and consolidations. The bipartisan character of the commission and the thorough manner in which it has approached its assignment make it probable that its recommendations will carry great weight with Congress.

The commission properly is concerned with relieving the President of some of his administrative details. It has been said that a good Commander in Chief should have no more than six persons reporting to him. Probably under no feasible arrangement would it be possible to reduce the number of departments and agencies directly under the President to even double this number. But certainly the addition of extra Cabinet departments and secretaries would help consolidate responsibility where this can be done efficiently. For example, a Federal Department of Welfare often has been suggested to supersede the Federal Security Agency, and similar additions might include Departments of Transportation and Public Works.

There is, of course, the danger that a larger Cabinet might become unwieldy. But the function of the Cromet in American practice is not so much to act as a unit as to accept a delegation of responsibility and advise the President within particular jurisdictions. It sometimes has been proposed that the Vice President, whose duties as President of the Senate are largely supernumerary, might usefully be assigned the job of Secretary of Administration. Such a plan might run into difficulty because of the fact that the Vice President is elected and does not have the same responsibility to the President as an appointive officer does. But certainly there is historical precedent for bringing the Vice President into the Cabinet to give him an understanding of the workings of the executive branch. Indeed, he might well serve as a sort of Secretary of the Cabinet, relieving the President of some of the duties of coordination.

Stress And Strain

The pessimism reported in Allied capitals on the Russo-Western conversations is genuine enough. But how much is due to sheer fatigue is another matter. Secretary Marshall himself looks well, and, though he is not by nature an equable man, he appears to have developed at least a facade of composure. Yet the kind of diplomacy waged by the Kremlin is foreign to his temperament. He is, moreover, a soldier by training and approach, and the weasel words and circumlocution associated with Soviet diplomacy leave him puzzled. Even John Hay commented on his trials in dealing with Russian diplomatic "mendacity," but John Hay's task was child's play compared to Mr. Marshall's, for Soviet diplomacy, being the spearhead of an international conspiracy, has a super-Machiavellian quality about it. Nor, as the quick change over the Italian colonies testifies, is it subject to disguise.

This new contempt for world opinion is something to wonder at. No Czarist diplomat would keep a straight face in the manner of his Soviet counterpart while indulging in repetitious lies which are palpably devoid of any connection with fact. We are thinking particularly of the Kasenkina exchanges. In similar circumstances Mr. Hull dressed down Japan's Kurusu in the final interview prior to the Japanese-American war, but Mr. Hull then knew that the guns had already gone off, and he could vent his indignation with impunity. Mr. Marshall has need for and shows restraint, in spite of temptations that must be frequent to repeat Mr. Hull's performance. The cross is equally hard to bear for Mr. Marshall's aides who have to spend the night watches in the dual task of keeping a united front among the Allies and evolving fresh instructions for the Allied representatives in Moscow and Berlin.

It may be, as we say, that the fatigue of the performance, which must be telling on the Allied spokesmen in Berlin and Moscow as well as on their Foreign Offices, accounts for some of the current despondency. The situation may not be so bad as they feel, especially in view of the historical fact that the Russians have a habit of going to the edge of an abyss, and then retreating. No such assumption, of course, can be made. But, if whistling may be excused, one of these days we may all wake up and find that Stalin has spelled out the order for the compromise which Marshal Sokolovsky ignored completely when the execution of it was undertaken last week in Berlin. That compromise was to withdraw the Western currency from Berlin and install the Soviet currency under four-power control, and lift the blockade. That, of course, would be only a beginning. It would remain to be seen whether the runaround would be repeated, with Sokolovsky acting as if he had never heard of Stalin.

If no progress can be made, then the United Nations will be invoked. The case—a threat to peace by one of the great powers—was not envisaged by the United Nations at the time of its organization. The U. N. was based upon the unity of the great powers, who were equipped with individual rights of veto. Accordingly a reference to the U. N. of a dispute charging Soviet Russia with a threat to the peace would most likely split the world organization from top to bottom. The impasse, indeed, is marked by what is tantamount to a loss of good faith in the words and deeds of the Soviet government. So that, even if the Soviet Union agrees to a compromise, one wonders how long any joint administration can be pursued in Berlin with any degree of harmony.

Facts First

Chairman Thomas of the House Committee on Un-American Activities seems determined to demonstrate the worst in congressional investigative procedure. He now claims to be on the trail of a Soviet agent named Arthur Adams whose special assignment was to obtain wartime atomic and radar secrets from the United States. But instead of building up his case and then conducting hearings to give the public first-hand information, he talks in a vague way to the press about what he hopes to show in the future. The cardinal rule of fair investigation is that the committee shall get the facts before drawing any conclusions or making any report. Mr. Thomas, however, talks about what he is going to do while the investigation is still in the initial stages.

At least 10 more witnesses are to be examined behind closed doors, Mr. Thomas says, before the committee will proceed with public hearings. If this means that the committee is trying to screen testimony so as to avoid irresponsible charges in open sessions, it is all to the good. Some other committees accomplish the same result by expert staff work, including interviews with the prospective witnesses. That method seems preferable to us, although we see no serious objection to secret sessions if the rights of witnesses are carefully safeguarded and if such sessions are used only to screen irresponsible charges that should not be made in public without confirmation. In no event, however, is there excuse for casual preliminary disclosures by committee members before the investigation is complete. This practice is so obviously a bid for headlines that it tends to undermine whatever serious work the committee may have in hand.

Atlantic Union

A minor gambit in the cold war is the revelation, in the nature of a purposeful "leak," that joint military staff planning in London has made rapid progress under the pressure of the worsening Berlin crisis. Highly secret conversations began last summer between high officers of Britain, Canada, France, and the Benelux countries. A group of American military men arrived late in July to "sit in" on the talks and apparently have contributed no little to their success, for the obvious reason that the others could reach no final decisions without knowing the position and intentions of the United States.

The accomplishments to date in London are said to include over-all coordination of strategy, plans for standardization of arms, plans for common supply of materiel, and plans for joint use of overseas bases. These are understood not to form the basis for a military alliance among the parties, but to be "blueprints" for use in the event of an emergency. They are also—deliberately premature leaks to the contrary notwithstanding—not to be publicly announced until the November election is over!

Military understandings with the nations of western Europe, plans for joint and common action in case of need, are perhaps better than nothing. If and when the emergency arrives with an outbreak of war, we would not be starting quite from scratch with strategic and logistic planning. But the advantage is in reality much slighter than it seems. Regardless of how complete the blueprints may be, the outbreak of war is too late in the game to put them into proper effect. If standardization of arms and supply of materiel is necessary, it must be complete before war starts. The example of the French army, which must be re-equipped and can only be reequipped from the United States, is a case in point. Unless the French army can withstand assault in the first days or weeks of a war, its strategic value is totally lost.

The answer is not the simple one of saying "Let's take the necessary steps in advance, then." The nations of western Europe have no desire just to be given arms. They want, and they are right in wanting, the guarantees that a real alliance would give. For this purpose nothing short of a union of all the Atlantic nations will suffice. In our opinion the conversations in London should be on the political as well as the military plane. This would give the Western powers some real leverage in negotiations with Russia and would not necessarily close the door to compromise if the Kremlin doesn't want it closed.

Jinnah's Religion

The Pakistanian Embassy has formally protested the statement in our editorial of last Monday that the deceased Governor-General of Pakistan, Mohamed Ali Jinnah, was by birth a Hindu. Mr. Jinnah's ancestors, according to a spokesman for the embassy, had been Moslems for at least three generations.

The statement concerning Mr. Jinnah's religious origins was based on the obituary published in The New York Times of September 12, and supported by information obtained from expert sources. The newspaper in making the point that the Quad-e-Azam, or "Great Leader," meaning Mr. Jinnah, was "a man of bewildering paradoxes," said that he "was actually born a Hindu and espoused Islam in his youth."

As far as our information goes, this statement is correct. Nevertheless it is true that a considerable mystery surrounds the circumstances of Mr. Jinnah's birth. He appears to have been a native of Bombay and to have spent his early life among the members of a Moslem sect called the Khojas. The Khojas are said to be descendants of a group of Indians who after their conversion to Islam preserved many Hindu rituals and customs. The name Jinnah, which is not common among either Hindus or Moslems, appears to have been derived from a Hindustani word meaning "lean," or "slender." According to some persons familiar with the Bombay presidency, this was not the name of the late Governor-General's father, but of his Moslem mother; others say that it was the name of a Moslem uncle who adopted him in childhood.

It is at any rate certain that he was brought under Moslem influences rather early in life, but there is much evidence that at no time in his life did he take the Moslem rituals or the injunctions of the Koran very seriously. This is shown, among other things, by his marriage to the daughter of a Parsee baronet, who, however, died about a dozen years after their marriage.

His daughter by that marriage married the son of Sir Ness Wadia, a Parsee by birth but a Christian by persuasion. This marriage appears to have been an occasion of much scandal among the members of the Moslem League. At any rate, Jinnah is said to have disowned his daughter in consequence. Such are the facts, as far as we have been able to discover them.

EARLIEST OF SNOWS

The April bloom perceives the first
Autumnal worm of pain,
The mole, when seeds begin to burst,
Assails the root again.

When from the bough the robin calls
By lanes where lovers walk,
Along the land, obliquely, falls
The shadow of the hawk.

The rabbit leaves the parent side,
Which way the huntsman knows,
When petals down the pear tree glide,
The earliest of snows.

British Appraisal

Having just read the article, "Determined Britain Calls in Efficiency Experts," by Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr., in The Washington Post of September 12, I hasten to express my appreciation of his fair and succinct analysis of Britain's fight in the "economic war." I myself am British, temporarily employed in an international agency in Washington, but I am closely in touch with events at home. Perhaps, as Mr. Kuhn says, I can "look at the country's (i. e. Britain's) record from a distance" and I am glad therefore to find that the observations of an acute outside reporter justify my pride in what we have done so far.

Articles like Mr. Kuhn's are of inestimable help. Giving credit for our achievement, he nevertheless—and very rightly—points out that there is still much to be done before we can become economically self-reliant at an acceptable standard of living; therefore he avoids the danger of encouraging complacency, which, like self-pity, is one of the main dangers threatening our success in the grim fight for economic recovery.

Voting Information

We value your editorial of September 15, 1948, "Wanted: A Badger." Any publicity of our earnest efforts to extend suffrage to the citizens of the District of Columbia and to increase citizen participation in Government is always appreciated.

We feel that your readers will want to know that our absentee voters information is free and has been especially planned to meet the needs of all residents of this area. Actually more men than women are availing themselves of this service. We would like to point out that our information is completely nonpartisan. We are not interested in party affiliation (nor marital status) and no record of names of those asking for information is kept.

The demand on our office for voters information has been so great that we have found it necessary to install an absentee voters information desk at 1101 Pennsylvania ave. Service there is available from 11:30 a. m. to 8 p. m., Monday through Friday and may be obtained by calling EX. 0488.

We would particularly like to reassure any Wisconsin men who may still be wanting absentee voters information that they may come to our desk without danger of incurring any entangling alliances. While no follow-up report can be made on the young lady in question, we feel sure that individual initiative can accomplish wonders even in the District of Columbia. No doubt she has already trapped her badger.

Suffering Lessened

A recent article on the progress science has made in anesthetics, rendering surgery and numerous sufferings insensible to the agony of pain, brought to mind the experiences my father, Enoch Magruder Lowe, went through during the Civil War. When a mere youth, he enlisted in the Confederate Army as a cavalryman under the beloved Gen. J. E. B. Stuart.

The horrors of the battles of Bull Run and Manassas made a lasting impression on father. Years after, when he married and had a family, time had softened the sight of amputations without an anesthetic. Chloroform and morphine were the only sedatives, and both were scarce. The casualties were so great that many of the wounded were operated on in an improvised hospital, called the "Stone House," which can be seen just beyond Centreville on the Lee hwy.

In that little house, the morning after the first day of battle, the arms and legs from the wounded were in a heap from the ground to the second-story window—many removed without a whiff of chloroform. In these days with penicillin and other drugs limbs can be saved. There was no time then, nor were there facilities, when men were falling like wheat before the scythe.

Battles raged for days in that area of Bull Run, and down from the hillsides the streams ran with bloody water. Someone has spoken of a plateau resembling a field of wild flowers in springtime where thousands of Zouaves in their bright-colored uniforms lay dead.

This was war and so futile. If there has to be another war, we can be thankful that bright minds have accomplished much for the alleviation of suffering.

"The World's Oil"

The letter of September 8 by Harold L. Ickes exhibits such characteristic ill temper and is so full of insinuations as to improper motives by those holding views differing from his own that one who does not care to be splashed with mud might well hesitate about attempting an answer.

What called forth Mr. Ickes' diatribe is a series of extensive and illuminating articles by H. G. Moulton, a distinguished mining engineer, on the subject of the "World's Oil," which appeared in The Washington Post of August 1 and 8. Mr. Ickes' criticisms of the articles are demonstrably unfair and misleading.

Thus he says: "Apparently it has not occurred to Mr. Moulton that it might be sound national policy to bring in cheaper oil from the outside, while it is still available, while saving some of our own against some such trifling emergency as a future world war might constitute." This statement is untrue. Mr. Moulton's articles show that: "In all, American interests operating at home and abroad produced at least 80 per cent of the world's oil," and that Russia and the so-called Iron Curtain countries produced 8 per cent. Mr. Ickes apparently did not even observe the large-type heading of the August 8 article which read, "Fuel-Short U. S. Reaching South and East," much less the text which explained that under our much-condemned free enterprise system "American nationals produce about two thirds of the Latin-American and one-half of the Middle East output." Due to the private enterprise of our American oil companies they have invested 400 million dollars in the petroleum industry of Venezuela; and, of the 1,190,000 barrels daily production in that country, one-third goes to the United States and Canada at the present time.

Similarly, the private enterprise of American companies in the development of the rich Middle East oil fields, which by 1955 will involve a total investment of one billion dollars or more, not only will provide oil for the military requirements of the United States in some future global war but will also supply the needs of western Europe, our possible allies, and the excess requirements of the Eastern Hemisphere, and eventually of the growing requirements of the United States.

Today, as Mr. Moulton points out, the United States consumes 353 gallons of oil per capita while western Europe consumes only 31. Mr. Ickes no doubt would be in favor of dealing our despised private enterprise system a deadly blow by rationing our industry, our farmers, home owners, automobile users, etc., to the same number of gallons consumed in western Europe.

As a parting shot, Mr. Ickes interjected a subject not touched upon by Mr. Moulton and not relevant to the phase of the subject which the latter undertook to discuss. "Incidentally," says Mr. Ickes, "neither had Mr. Moulton anything to say on the subject of whether the people should be despoiled of their tidelands for the benefit of the oil industry and 'free enterprise'." By this Mr. Ickes intends to say that the people will be "despoiled" unless title to the tidelands is taken away from our States in whom it has been vested for more than a hundred years, according to a long line of Supreme Court decisions, and transferred to the Federal Government in accordance with the radically new concept of constitutional law proclaimed by a divided court on June 23, 1947, in the California Tidelands Case, repudiating precedents universally accepted and applied by every department of the Government during 171 years.

Anyone interested in viewing this question fairly should read the reports of the House and Senate subcommittees, which jointly held hearings on S. 1988 of the Eightieth Congress "to confirm and establish the titles of the States to lands beneath navigable waters within State boundaries," etc. This bill was supported unanimously by the Conference of Governors representing all the States (not merely those having tidelands); also by the National Association of Attorneys General of the States, by the United States Conference of Mayors, the American Bar Association and by many other associations and individuals. The list of those in opposition was very small. It did, of course, include Mr. Ickes—the same Mr. Ickes who, as Secretary of the Interior and Federal Oil Administrator, in December, 1933, rendered an opinion to the effect that "Title to the soil under the ocean within the 3-mile limit is in the State of California, and the land may not be appropriated except by authority of the State."

The House and Senate by large majorities passed S. 1988 to correct the Supreme Court decision in the California case but did not muster the two-thirds majority necessary to override President Truman's veto. However, the Republican platform contains a plank which it is hoped will result next year in restoring the tidelands to the States where they belong.

Russians Take Notice

It is interesting to note the curious parallels that exist in the Russian attitude toward mankind, science and the United States with those which were present in the Japanese teachings prior to Pearl Harbor.

The Japanese broadened their myths about heavenly descent from the assertion that the Emperor was the direct descendant of the Sun Goddess Amaterasu-Omikami to the statement that all Japanese were descended from the gods through the Sun Goddess. The Russians hold that they are a superior race of supermen, created to rule the world through communism.

The Japanese claimed all of the important inventions, the telephone, the airplane, the automobile, the radio and numerous other discoveries. The Russians have embarked on a similar series of claims to the inventions which have advanced the world, the telephone, the airplane, the automobile, the radio, radar, and numerous others.

The Japanese pointed with pride to their great army and navy, and knew in their own minds that the combined forces of the rest of the world were helpless before the imperial forces. The Russians have the same boasts now.

Noting the situation and the historical precedents, one must also note that the Japanese army and navy were destroyed after they challenged America.

Army's Task

HOUSEWIVES struggling to keep the family budget within the family income in spite of sky-high prices will sympathize with the budgetary problems of a man with a whale of a housekeeping problem. Gen. Omar N. Bradley, Chief of Staff, is working on the budget for the Army for the next fiscal year, and he is finding out what inflation means.

The Army dollar will go only about one third as far as it went in 1939 and 1940 when that earlier draft law went into effect. Measured in terms of actual cost of the infinite number of things an Army must use, the figures are startling.

Before World War II it cost 41 cents a day for a soldier's ration. Today the cost is $1.06.

The Army could buy a soldier's outer clothing in 1939 for $84. Today the same clothing—uniform, blouse, shoes, and so on—costs $245. A pair of shoes that could be bought in 1940 for $3.05 now bears a price tag of $5.50, and a pair of pants marked $3.68 10 years ago now costs $9.62.

This reflects in large part the same kind of price rises the average householder is all too familiar with. But it also indicates the reluctance of large suppliers to bid on Army orders. They were eager for Army orders in the '30's when millions were unemployed and unable even with low prices to buy the products of America's mass-production industry.

ANYONE with a knowledge of simple arithmetic can see how these prices complicate Bradley's problem. As the draft begins to function, 10,000 men a month will be inducted. Multiplying 10,000 by $245, you get $2,450,000 as the cost of outer clothing for these rookies.

That, of course, is just the beginning. Each new soldier must be fed, he must be given military equipment and trained within the period of 21 months for which he has been inducted.

So Bradley and his staff are sitting up late and sharpening their pencils. The deadline for submitting budget figures is October 15.

While the high cost of shoes and shirts is a serious obstacle in the way of building up the national defenses, it is in some respects, so far as the Chief of Staff of the Army is concerned, a minor problem. The Army must compete for funds with the other two services—Air Force and Navy.

THE COMPETITION with the Air Force is particularly tough. As Bradley knows very well, air power has been oversold to the American public. It is sensational, spectacular, showy. Ardent propagandists have helped to spread the convenient myth that a few men in a few planes with a few bombs can end a war in a few days.

Both the Army and Navy are deeply skeptical of these claims. Army men, such as Bradley, have not forgotten that it took five million to six million American GIs on the continent of Europe to defeat Nazi Germany. But the inflated myth of supertriumphant air power is a convenient "out" in public and congressional thinking.

A ceiling of 15 billion dollars has been mentioned to cover the needs of all three services for the next fiscal year. This could have political connotations in a campaign year and certainly it would be subject to revision by a new Administration.

The 15 billion figure compares with $13,928,394,248 in base appropriations for the national military establishment for the fiscal year 1949. The Army got $4,257,784,701, the Navy $4,744,294,251, and the Air Force $4,926,215,296.

Since Congress has approved a 70-group Air Force the demand of the air arm will be even more insistent this time. No one has yet gotten down even to a tentative allocation of the 15 billion. The three branches are now perfecting their claims.

Bradley, who has served less than a half year of his four-year tenure as Chief of Staff, has no illusions about the struggle ahead. As of August 1, the strength of the Army was 579,000. On September 5 it was an estimated 612,000, and in June of 1949 the total will be, according to present estimates, 900,000.

That is a big jump in peacetime. It means hard, incessant, slugging work for the modest, soft-spoken man whose courage, integrity and capacity have made him Chief of Staff. It is a little like the hard, slugging effort of Bradley's foot soldiers in Europe in 1944 and 1945.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph And Stewart Alsop

Berlin Is A Wedge

THE BERLIN crisis has had at least one useful result. It has cast considerable light on the Kremlin's future plans for the organization of the new Soviet empire. It is now an even bet that what is ahead—perhaps in a few months, perhaps after a year or so—is the forcible bodily incorporation of Russia's eastern European satellites in a greater Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

Throughout the Berlin negotiations, the Kremlin has sought to gain two objectives. Objective number one has been to upset British, French and American plans to make western Germany a working, producing area with a sane governmental structure. Included in this objective has been Soviet participation in control of the Ruhr.

Objective number two, however, has been simply to expel the western Allies from Berlin. And the real Soviet effort has not been concentrated on the Ruhr or even on upsetting the arrangements for western Germany. The real effort has been to gain this second objective of total, exclusive control of Berlin.

As is indicated by the report of the odds given above, expert opinion is still about evenly divided. But a constantly growing faction holds that the struggle to drive us from Berlin must be linked to the Kremlin's over-all plans for the eastern European satellites.

If this faction reasons correctly, the Soviets began some months ago to batten down the hatches, so to speak, throughout their European conquests. (The difficulty with Marshal Tito is, of course, an obvious incident in this process.)

BERLIN, unfortunately, lies deep within the Soviet zone of Germany. Since the end of the war, it has been the one really important place where the western and Soviet powers were in constant, intimate contact. With the western Allies still controlling their sectors of Berlin, the correct organization of the Soviet zone of Germany—as the Soviets view correct organization—has been and still is an impossibility. Our occupation of Berlin, in short, has the effect of a huge wedge, which prevents the hatches of the Russian empire from being battened down as completely as the Kremlin wishes.

This interpretation of the Berlin crisis is confirmed by intelligence from the Soviet satellites. Long ago, it was reported that Andrei Vishinsky had gone to Bucharest to order Madam Ana Pauker to transform Romania into a Soviet republic. Eventually, other similar reports covered the whole vast area of the Soviet Union's European conquests. Romania, Bulgaria, Hungary, Czechoslovakia, eastern Germany and Poland were all to be made Soviet republics. These regions also were to suffer the fate of the unhappy Baltic states.

Until recently, the authorities in Washington paid relatively little attention to these reports. But now the course of the Berlin negotiations, plus the swelling mass of local evidence, has caused the earlier analysis of the situation to be re-examined.

THE REPORTS keep coming. Only last month for example, a high official of the Czech Foreign Office fled from Prague. He stated that he had actually seen tentative plans to incorporate Czechoslovakia into the Soviet Union. As he described the plans, the deed was to be done after a rigged plebiscite, which was to be held at a very early date.

Furthermore, other evidence seems to be in accord with such seemingly sensational intelligence. Everywhere beyond the iron curtain, the Communist parties, the secret police forces and the national armies are being ruthlessly purged of "unreliable elements." According to one high source, Premier Gottwald has ordered the elimination of between 5000 and 6000 officers in the Czech army alone. The purges are on a similar scale elsewhere.

Finally, the logic of the Soviet situation suggests that the satellites must eventually be transformed into mere provinces of Russia. The Kremlin's economic, political and military plans constantly drive its puppets into supremely disagreeable courses of action. Already, the puppets have a tendency to rebel, as the case of Gomulka in Poland indicates.

Rebellion is bound to become more likely everywhere, as the Kremlin policies continue to force down the living standards and reshape the political habits of the eastern European peoples. There is only one way to make sure that the rebellion of the puppets will not take an unmanageable form. And that is for the Kremlin to assume direct control of the satellite armies and police.

AS NOTED, the betting is still only about even that the Kremlin will take the gigantic risk of crushing out the last remnants of independence remaining to its eastern European satellites. Even the pessimists believe that when and if the deed is done, it may be elaborately disguised. The Czechs, Poles and the rest may be allowed to retain the semblance of national governments, while the instruments of real power—the police forces and troops—pass under direct Soviet command.

There is no accurate means of forecasting the Kremlin's purposes. The project to extend the Russian border westward pretty certainly exists, but may be at any moment shelved forever. Yet one must look forward to the time when the Berlin crisis will probably occasion a final split in the United Nations. If this happens, one can forecast that the international bookmakers will alter the odds on the absorption of the satellites to better than the even money they now quote.

Truman Off Today on Trip To West Coast

By The Associated Press

President Truman will leave Washington today for a 16-day campaign tour that will take him to the West Coast and back.

The President will delver what is described as a major speech of his tour Saturday at Dexter, Iowa, then move westward. He has scheduled a three-day stay in Texas on the way back from the Pacific Coast. He will return to Washington by way of Missouri, Illinois, Kentucky and Ws Virginia—all key States in his presidential election drive.

E. George Luckey, chairman of the Truman-Barkley ticket committee in Los Angeles, said the President will have to use Gilmore stadium for his September 23 talk because the Republicans had tied up the larger Hollywood bowl "to rehearse some complicated lighting effects" for Dewey's appearance the next night.

Democratic National Chairman J. Howard McGrath promptly charged the GOP with "leasing an empty stadium" just to deny it to Mr. Truman.

Calling that action "Un-American," McGrath said in New York: "I am sure that Governor Dewey on sober second thought will disavow the action of his team-mates on the so-called Dewey team."

North Carolina Visit By Truman Held Likely

At the White House yesterday, J. Melville Broughton, Democratic candidate for Senator in North Carolina, said after calling on Mr. Truman that the President probably would visit Raleigh, N. C., in mid-October. Broughton said the President had been invited to ceremonies dedicating a monument in Raleigh to President Andrew Jackson, James Polk and Andrew Johnson.

The President also is planning to go to Florida to address the national convention of the American Legion, which will be held in Miami from October 18 to 21.

A prediction that the Truman-Barkley ticket would carry Connecticut in November if the vote is heavy was made by Senator Brien McMahon, Democrat, of Connecticut. He said the ticket could be defeated only if the vote is light. The President's chances in Connecticut, he added, "are much better than they were six months ago."

2 Parties Aim At War Profits, Wallace Says

Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 16 (AP).—Henry A. Wallace said tonight that both major political parties were participating in a profit-seeking war program.

The Progressive Party's presidential candidate, in a speech prepared for a meeting sponsored by the local "Wallace for President Committee," said:

"The monopolists have made the war program the lever to control the country.

"The war budget inflates prices and drives profits beyond their fondest hopes."

Asserting that "the leaders of both parties elbow each other out of the way in their rush to ameliorate the condition of the downtrodden corporation," Wallace said.

"Is there a tobacco surplus or a drop in the profits of the grain speculators? Ship the threatened surplus abroad. Are the aircraft companies losing money? Double and triple the spending for military aircraft. Both old parties rush to the rescue."

The "monopolist" have "converted the government of Franklin Roosevelt into the model of Republican reaction which he fought," Wallace declared.

He asserted that the Democratic strategy "is to hide the Truman of the fear-breeding Truman doctrine and the Truman who breaks strikes and the Truman who incites witch-hunts behind a Truman who embraces the program of Roosevelt."

"If Truman is riding the coattails of Roosevelt," he continued, "Dewey is still afraid of his ghost. . . . Dewey does not dare pit himself openly against the ghost of a dead man. He does not dare reveal again the ideas which Roosevelt so soundly defeated in 1944."

Wallace said Dewey "does not want the people of America to remember that Dewey's domestic policies conceal the depression policies of Herbert Hoover," adding:

"He does not want the people of America to remember that his foreign policy is the war-breeding policy of the cartels and the monopolies to make an arsenal of Germany and a colony of eastern Europe.

"He does not want the people to remember that behind him are the same men who gave him views in 1944—the oil men and the big bankers, the trust makers and the munitions makers, the high tariff men and the corrupt machine men, the newspaper titans and the preachers of hate, the labor-baiters and the racists."

Barkley Plans 15 Talks in Next 2 Weeks

By The Associated Press

Senator Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky will make 15 speeches in eight States within the next two weeks, opening his Democratic vice presidential campaign at Wilkes-Barre, Pa., on Saturday.

Senator McGrath (D., R. I.), chairman of the Democratic National Committee, announced Barkley's itinerary yesterday. He said Barkley "will travel in airplanes, trains and automobiles."

His first speech before the State convention of the CIO United Steelworkers of America will be followed by visits within the next two weeks in Maryland, Delaware, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Massachusetts and North Carolina.

Optimistic on Connecticut

Barkley returned only today from Rome.

One of his colleagues, Senator McMahon (D., Conn.), claimed, meanwhile, there is a "good chance" the Democratic ticket of President Truman and Barkley will carry Connecticut in November.

He conditioned such a Democratic victory on a total vote of one million or more, as compared with the 1944 vote of approximately 900,000.

McGrath said he will announce within a few days the October schedule for Barkley. The September schedule is:

September 18: Wilkes-Barre, Pa., and St. Mary's, Md.; September 21: Georgetown, Dover and Wilmington, Del.; September 22, Bridgeport, Conn.; September 24: Atlantic City, N. J., United Hebrew Trades meeting.

September 25: Worcester, Mass., American Federation of Labor meeting and Democratic State convention; September 27: Asheville, N. C.; September 28: Rochester, N. Y., and September 29: Niagara Falls and Buffalo, N. Y.

Salt Lake City, Utah, Sept. 16 (AP).—Governor Earl Warren tonight appealed to the American voter, in a "world beset by fear," not to permit political passions of the 1948 campaign to disrupt national unity or play into the hands of those "preaching the doctrine of fear."

The Republican vice presidential candidate declared Americanism and governmental principle were not the "patent" of any single political party.

The American people "know that good Americans are to be found in both parties," he declared in a prepared address.

It was a homespun note of political virtue and bipartisan national unity that the California Governor opened the Republican election campaign.

His speech here, in the auditorium of South High School, was the first key address in a coast-to-coast campaign swing which started yesterday at Sacramento, and is scheduled to continue until late October.

"I believe," Warren said, "that our best chance of preserving responsible government under the two-party system depends upon how wholesome our campaigns can be, how free they are from the prejudice of party, class or race, and upon the extent to which we can unify, rather than divide, our people."

But to preserve the traditional American concept of the two-party system, Warren urged a return to the old-fashioned virtues of thrift and competence in Government after 16 years of Democratic Party "cure-all . . . nostrums and expedients."

This return, he said, the Republican Party was prepared to achieve under the leadership of Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York, the Republican Presidential standard bearer.

Warren was scornful of those he said accused their political opposition of blind reaction, "or by preaching the doctrine of fear designed to affect a decision of the American people."

He was equally scornful of "right" and "left" political splinter "segments."

"There is," he said of the Republican Party, "no left segment to splinter off, there is no segment on the right to secede."

He asserted the United States today is suffering apprehension over the cost of living, cost of Government, labor-management relations, and relations between farm and industry.

He said to obtain true progress "we must achieve national unity."

The "main question" of the present election campaign, he said, may be defined as this:

"Is the present National Administration displaying the unity, competence and the leadership to warrant extending its tenure to 20 years?

"Or, has the time come for better housekeeping methods that can only be supplied by new leadership and a new broom?

"I believe that time has arrived."

—And the Rains Came

Salt Lake City, Sept. 16 (U.P.).—Gov. Earl Warren, GOP vice presidential candidate, made a plea at nearby Ogden today for more water for the West in order to develop its resources and industry.

At that moment it began to rain—for the time in six weeks.

Senate Probers Lay Export Fraud To 2 New Yorkers

Senate investigators asked the Department of Justice yesterday to look into alleged fraud by two New York City exporters.

William P. Rogers, committee counsel, said the cases of Robert M. Mistrough and Murray M. Nelson have been referred to the Department by Chairman Ferguson (R., Mich.), of the Expenditures Subcommittee on Investigations.

Committee investigators said Mistrough last year exported more than a million pounds of scarce cast iron pipe labeled as "concrete pipe," which requires no export license. Mistrough denied the amount was that large, and said the pipe could not be used here.

Nelson's name figured in testimony given the committee about two typewriters which a forgery expert said were used to write letters dated from such places as India, Syria, Portugal and New York City, all at about the same time. The letters were attached to export licenses applications.

Comic Book Laws Asked

Chicago, Sept. 16 (U.P.).—The National Council of Parents and Teachers today demanded that State laws be passed prohibiting objectionable comic books, radio programs and motion pictures.

Truman Loses Hollywood Bowl

Hollywood, Sept. 16 (AP).—President Truman will deliver the major speech of his West Coast campaign September 23 in Gilmore Stadium, a Democratic spokesman said tonight, after failing to get Hollywood Bowl, where Republican Candidate Thomas Dewey speaks the following night.

E. George Luckey, chairman of the Truman-Barkley committee in Los Angeles, said in a statement tonight that the Republicans rented Hollywood Bowl, which has greater seating capacity than Gilmore Stadium, for the night of September 24 and had preempted it for the night of September 23 to "rehearse some complicated lighting effects."

Luckey said an attempt was made to the get Republicans to switch their "rehearsal," but that it was asserted it couldn't be done without approval from Dewey headquarters in the East.

2 New York Socialites Enter Catholic Convent

Philadelphia, Sept. 16 (AP).—Two New York daughters of socially prominent families have entered the Roman Catholic Convent of the Holy Child in suburban Sharon Hill to begin training as nuns.

They are Constance Murray, 19, daughter of Mrs. John F. Murray, and Suzanne Pedrick, 18, daughter of Capt. William J. Pedrick, president of the Fifth Avenue Association and Collector of Internal Revenue for the Second New York District.

The Gallup Poll

New Jersey Sentiment Shift Puts State in GOP Column

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Sept. 16.—New Jersey, which went Democratic by slim margins in the last two presidential elections, is today over in the Republican column.

Interviewing throughout the State shows the following division of sentiment at the present time:

"If the presidential election were being held TODAY how would you vote—for Truman, for Dewey or for Wallace?"

NEW JERSEY
(16 Electoral Votes)

Dewey	50%
Truman	38
Wallace	3
Undecided	9

Today's report is the sixth in a series showing the standings of the candidates in the individual States. So far the poll results show Gov. Thomas E. Dewey leading in four States—New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and California —while President Truman leads in one—his home State of Missouri.

In the sixth State thus far reported—South Carolina—Governor J. Strom Thurmond, candidate of the Southern States' Rights Party, is well in the lead. The score:

DEWEY LEADING

New York—Dewey 42 per cent, Truman 32 per cent, Wallace 14 per cent, Undecided 12 per cent.

PENNSYLVANIA — Dewey 53 per cent, Truman 37 per cent, Wallace 3 per cent, undecided 7 per cent.

CALIFORNIA — Dewey 49 per cent, Truman 35 per cent, Wallace 7 per cent, undecided 9 per cent.

NEW JERSEY—Reported above.

MISSOURI — Truman 53 per cent, Dewey 36 per cent, undecided 11 per cent. (At time of poll Wallace had not qualified on the Missouri election ballot. Later reports are that the Wallace ticket will be on the Missouri ballot. Governor Thurmond, however, will not be on the Missouri ballot.)

Thurmond Leading

SOUTH CAROLINA—Thurmond 52 per cent, Truman 26 per cent, Dewey 10 per cent, Wallace less than 1 per cent, undecided 12 per cent.

Newsprint Cuts Held Chaining British Papers

Edinburgh, Scotland, Sept. 16 (U.P.).—John Gordon, editor of the Sunday Express, warned today that drastic cuts in newsprint are putting British newspapers "in chains."

Gordon, speaking before the annual conference of the Institute of Journalists, said the heavy reductions in newsprint imports from Canada were ordered to make newspapers "less powerful, and there is a definite attempt to put newspapers in chains."

Novel Technique Enhances Horror

By Richard L. Coe

"ROPE," at the Warner, is a brilliant picture about as depraved a murder as you're likely to find. Alfred Hitchcock and a covey of his artisans have worked out an imaginative production of Patrick Hamilton's famous stage thriller, but it is not for the weak-hearted and decidedly not for the kiddies.

Most of the murders you read about and certainly all you see on the screen have a reason for murder. But the motive in "Rope" is simply a youth's desire to kill for the sake of killing, to feel the sensuous thrill that comes in taking another's life. When Hamilton wrote his play in 1929, it was felt that his idea stemmed from the then recent Leopold-Loeb case and the parallels are there.

For the two central figures are well-born young men, the one a weakling under the power of the stronger, a cold, forbidding torturer, yet clever, urbane, attractive and able to be charming. They plot the perfect murder—the death of a college friend. Before dumping his body in a lake, they stuff it in an antique chest and invite their victim's family and fiancee to a cocktail party, serving their hors d'oeuvres from the candle-topped chest. Their victim is presumably about to join them and the party breaks up uncomfortably in anxiety about his nonappearance.

One of the guests is the boys' former prep school teacher, an inquiring man, fascinated by the subtleties of philosophy. When the boys had been at school they had often discussed with him the theories of murder, touching on the rights of the strong and smart over the weak and foolish. To the master it had been simply a discussion, but to the stronger of the boys it had been nourishment for his own depravity.

Expert, Natural Technicolor

Now the master comes back. He has, he says, forgotten his cigarette case. Actually the strained atmosphere of the party has baffled him, the finding of the missing guest's hat in a coat closet has quickened his curiosity and soon they are back at their schoolday habits of talking for the pleasure of talking. The inevitable end to the master's return is summed up in his realization of the horror his schoolday talks have brought.

Hitchcock has handled the story in the same continuous time-flow of action the play had on the stage. In the 80 minutes running time there is no fadeout to another scene; Hitchcock has kept his 10 reels of film going continuously (you notice the end of the reel only as the camera focusses on a character's back). The most natural Technicolor tints I recall indicate the fall of evening across the Manhattan skyline as it looks from the youths' smart rooftop apartment.

This is an essentially simple trick of shooting a film (the cast rehearsed meticulously for days, then ran through the play without breaks, just as you see it on the screen). But because it has not been done before, it seems like a fresh, novel approach—as indeed it is. And it is something of a daring tour de force for the director to have chosen the macabre story he has—that choice has the effect of making the trick seem even more violently different than it actually it.

As much credit for this novel technique goes to the director's technical associates as to his splendid cast. Arthur Laurents wrote the screen play from an adaptation by Actor Rume Cronyn and Joseph Valentine and William V. Skall share the major camera credits.

Constance Collier Returns

I have heard it remarked that the conversation—and necessarily there is much—is inane, peculiar, foolish, and that the two young men seem more like average youthful types than individuals. With most of this, I'm inclined to disagree. The conversation is no sillier than that of other foolish people who try to be what they consider sophisticated. And the point of the story is that, peculiar as the youths were, they had to have some sort of normalcy which would bring them normal associations.

The cast is absolutely first rate, from John Dall's biting performance as the stronger killer, to James Stewart's distraught horror at what his teaching has brought. It's truly wonderful to have Constance Collier back on the screen as an astrology-minded gamble dame, and Sir Cedric Hardwicke's style is as polished as ever.

"Rope" is indeed a fascinating horror, but I quail at the thought of its reception in Two Forks or Wabash of a Saturday night.

"ROPE." Warner Brothers release produced and directed by Alfred Hitchcock. Screen play by Arthur Laurents from Hume Cronyn's adaptation of the Patrick Hamilton play. Camera work by Joseph Valentine, William V. Skall, Edward Fitzgerald, Paul G. Hill, Richard Emmons and Morris Rosen. Music by Leo Forbstein. At the Warner.

Civilians Evacuated In Hukbalahap Fight

Manila, Sept. 16 (AP).—Large-scale evacuation of civilians by the military from nine municipalities in Bulacan Province, immediately north of Manila, was reported today.

The evacuation was part of the government's central Luzon operations being prepared against the Hukbalahap peasant army. Col. Eduardo Quintos, chief of police in Manila, ordered searches of all incoming vehicles for firearms.

HORROR, COMIC STYLE—That's not Bud Abbott with Lou Costello, but the little fella's regular partner is on hand with him in "Abbott and Costello Meet Frankenstein," on Palace screen

Not Too Deadly

Bud and Lou's Straight Men Are Zombies

AS YOU CAN imagine, Abbott and Costello go hog wild with such playmates as Dracula, Frankenstein's Monster, and the Wolf Man, all of whom they're meeting amid screams, yells and hoopla at the Palace this week. It's good fun.

Boasting the most descriptive title of the season, this wild charade is called "Abbott and Costello Meet Frankenstein," which is about as clear, if inaccurate, a title as there could be. Frankenstein's Monster is the specific character referred to, and he's as beguiling a chap as ever. Glenn Strange is playing the wheezy fellow these days and I dare say not even George Nathan could tell the difference between the Strange and Karloff readings. Bela Lugosi is his distraught, thirsty self; Lon Chaney, jr., is Wolfman.

How the rollicking duo comes up against so formidable a crew would be pointless to reveal, but the trio of script writers has sewed up just the woolly sort of adventure which fits—London, Florida, a masquerade party and a trap-door-abounding castle are the spots visited. Lenore Aubert is on top to be femininely sinister and, for goodness' sake, there's a pretty, virtuous blonde, a detective no less.

Gags and patter abound in the sinister setting. "You're making enough noise to wake up the dead," whispered Bud to Lou while they're unpacking Bela Lugosi. "I don't have to," replies Bud, "he's up." It rattles on like that and I found it relaxing fun. R. L. C.

Loyalty Program Gets Enthusiastic Approval of NFFE

Milwaukee, Wis., Sept. 16.—The National Federation of Federal Employes, the largest of the Government workers unions, today gave an enthusiastic and unanimous indorsement to the President's employe loyalty program at its biennial convention here.

In fact, the independent union would go a step further as it would have the employe investigations a legal requirement. The resolution expressed the fear that another administration might modify or drop the program.

The 500 delegates were brought to their feet cheering when the loyalty measure was read. They applauded wildly again when it was ordered approved without opposition.

The NFFE takes the view that the program is vital for two reasons: (1) To protect the Nation against disloyal employes, and (2) to protect loyal employes from unsubstantiated charges.

Despite all the witch-hunt stories, President Luther C. Steward revealed that the national headquarters of the NFFE had never received a single complaint on the conduct of the loyalty program.

The union was the first major employe group to call public attention to the need for a Federal loyalty screening procedure. It took this action years before the President issued his order which set up the program.

LEAVE: The convention voted to oppose any change in the present system which permits a classified employe to take 26 days annual and 15 days of sick leave. However, it urged employes to be "scrupulously careful" to avoid the abuse of the sick leave privilege. Along the same line, it voted for the assignment of a registered nurse to all Government offices with 500 or more employes.

MILITARY: The convention took a crack at the military brasshats who assign military people to civilian jobs. A resolution opposing the practice was adopted unanimously. During the discussion on it, President Steward commented:

"Thousands of civilian jobs are being filled by military personnel despite the fact the practice is contrary to both law and regulations; unsound from an administrative standpoint, and, in addition, costly and wasteful." He promised to continue the union's efforts to bring about its elimination.

These were among the other resolutions adopted; to extend immediately the classification act to jobs in the field service; to speed up promotions for outstanding employes, and to oppose any change in status for the Civil Service Retirement System.

The convention will continue through Friday. The election of officers will come at that time.

THE UNION went on record in favor of the creation of a board of appeals to hear and settle complaints and grievances from employes. It also instructed its national officers to work for the payment of true overtime—time and a half—for all work beyond 40 hours in any week.

On retirement, the NFFE urged the seasonal employes who hold their jobs over a long period be brought in under the system. Also, that employes on Federal-State cooperative projects be covered into the system.

A score of resolutions on wage board employes was referred to the union's executive council for appropriate action. The employe group refused to support a flat wage increase for the per diems or to advocate the creation of an over-all wage board to fix salaries of the 500,000 per diem workers as some of the resolutions had proposed.

6 Men and Stolen Property Seized by Police in Raid Here

The Washington Post

LOOT—N. H. Woodings, manager of the Southern States Service in Gaithersburg, Md., looks over property recovered by police in a raid on a Pennsylvania ave. house. Woodings had it back before he knew it was stolen

Police arrested six men, ranging in age from 20 to 28, early yesterday as alleged members of a gang that has been operating in the District, Maryland and Virginia.

Police seized the men and stolen property valued at several thousand dollars at about 6:30 a. m. when they made a carefully mapped raid on a house at 2403 Pennsylvania ave. nw.

An 18-year-old girl was also taken into custody in the raid, but was released after she had been questioned for several hours.

The raid was led by Detective Sergt. Francis Gaver of the general assignment squad and Plainclothes Detective Bernard Taylor of the Seventh Precinct. They were assisted by 12 policemen from the Third Precinct and several headquarters cruisers.

The raid was planned after police received a tip that stolen property was secreted on the premises of the Pennsylvania ave. address.

As the police party approached the house, a man was observed climbing out of a car. Gaver and Taylor seized him. In the back of the car, they said, were pressure cookers, canning machines, adding machines, electric fans and typewriters valued at about $700.

Police said the man admitted that he had just returned from Gaithersburg, Md., where he had stolen the equipment from the Southern States Cooperative Store.

Gaver and Taylor took this prisoner and his car to police headquarters, while other members of the raiding party entered the house.

Four men and the girl were arrested inside the house, police foiling the attempt of two of the men to slip out a back door. Police arrested a sixth man several hours later when he entered the house.

Police found several thousand dollars worth of electrical equipment and household appliances in a shed in the rear of the house. Some of the property was identified as that stolen in the past week from the Arcade Market Garage, 14th st. and Park rd. nw., and a drugstore at Vienna, Va.

Authorities in nearby communities were notified and it was suggested they visit headquarters here to examine the recovered loot.

Manslaughter Charge Filed In Maryland Auto Fatality

A technical charge of manslaughter was filed against a Bowie, Md., painter yesterday by Prince Georges County police as the result of a traffic death Wednesday night near Bowie.

Killed in the accident, which occurred at about 11:35 p. m. on High Bridge rd. about a mile from Defense hgwy., was Julius Kramer, 59, of Bowie, also a painter.

County police said Kramer was killed when a car driven by Alvin Harman, 35, ran off the road, smashed into a light pole and overturned.

Swerved to Avoid Other Car

Corpl. Lee Pumphrey of the county police said Harman told him he lost control of the car when he swerved to avoid another automobile coming out of a side road.

Kramer, a passenger in Harman's car, was pronounced dead at Prince Georges General Hospital, Cheverly. Harman escaped serious injury.

Harman was released in $1000 bond on the manslaughter charge. He also was charged with reckless driving and operating without a permit and bond of $100 each was set on these counts. He will appear in Hyattsville police court next Monday.

Kramer, unmarried, was a native of Butternut, Wisc., but had lived in Prince Georges County since 1923. He served in the Navy and Marine Corps in World War I and was a member of the Bowie American Legion post.

He is survived by four brothers, Erwin of Bowie, Otto and Albert, both of Glenn Dale, and Gustave of Mitchellville, and two sisters, Mrs. Mildred Holy of Battle Creek, Mich., and Mrs. Sophia Wengren of Park Falls, Wisc.

Funeral services will be held Monday at 12:45 p. m. at the Gasch funeral home, Hyattsville, and at 2 p. m. at Arlington Cemetery.

Meanwhile, here in the District, Maj. Robert J. Barrett, police superintendent, appointed a three-man board of inquiry to investigate the collision of an automobile and a police van Wednesday in which a veteran policeman, Pvt. Mortimer P. Donoghue, 58, was killed.

Named to the board were Inspector Milton D. Smith, chief property clerk of the police department; Capt. John Agnew, head of the Central Communications and Record Bureau, and Lieut. Marshall Gore of the traffic division.

Capt. Agnew

Inspector Smith

Lieut. Gore

The driver of the police van, Pvt. Earl Johnson, 48, was placed back on the critical list yesterday at Freedmen's Hospital. Physicians said that while Johnson apparently suffered only three fractured ribs his injury is aggravated by a diabetic condition.

The driver of the auto involved in the fatal crash was James J. Hartin, 54, of 1803 M st. ne.

Confers With Judges

Barrett conferred yesterday with two Municipal Court judges on disposition of the cases against 12 prisoners who were in the van when it overturned.

Judge Ellen K. Raedy said that this morning she would release the 10 persons charged with drunkenness. "They suffered enough in that crash," she said.

Judge Aubrey B. Fennell said he would review the convictions of the two persons charged with assault. He said that if it is consistent with justice and if he finds he can do so without involving "sympathy, passion or prejudice" he will lighten the sentences he plans to impose on them.

Funeral services for Donoghue will be held Saturday. A requiem mass will be said at 9:30 a. m. in St. Gabriel's Church, Grant Circle nw. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

In an accident yesterday, 11-year-old Aileen Barnhart, 1424 Somerset pl. nw., received a fractured right leg when she reportedly ran into an automobile while playing in an alley near her home. She was taken to Walter Reed Hospital by the driver of the auto, Goodman Piver, 1434 Somerset pl. nw., and later transferred to Children's Hospital.

$4,750,000 School Bond Issue Asked In Arlington

Board Backs Step After Compromise Sidetracks County Improvements Plan

By Don Olesen
Post Reporter

Arlington's School Board yesterday announced it would seek a $4,750,000 bond issue for school construction to be completed by September, 1951.

The step was taken after the Arlington County board, in a compromise move, gave up, for at least a year, its plans for a multi-million-dollar "general county improvement" bond issue of its own.

Mrs. Florence Cannon, a county board member, said the county bond idea was dropped for fear the two bond issues, lumped together, would be so high that one or both would be defeated by voters November 2.

The required 1000 signatures were being gathered yesterday on the school board's petition. The petition will be submitted to Arlington Circuit Court, which then has 15 days to order the especial referendum November 2, when voters may accept or reject the bond issue.

First Phase of Program

In a joint board conference Wednesday night, the county board was understood to have urged school officials to pare their bond request from the $5,590,000 originally considered to $4,750,000.

The $5,590,000 figure had been indorsed by the majority of 200 citizens attending a special school board meeting Tuesday night.

Under the lower bond issue requested by the school board, the following first phase of the program would be tentatively scheduled for completion by September 1950:

1. Twenty classrooms in new elementary schools, or else 30 classrooms added to present facilities at a cost of $1,700,000.

2. A 33-room new junior high school for white students with cafeteria and gymnasium to cost $1,750,000. Site negotiations for this school are near completion, board officials said.

3. A possible addition to the Negro Hoffman-Boston School to hold a cafeteria, gymnasium, shop, at a cost of $250,000.

Second Phase

By September of 1951, the following would be completed if the school bond is adopted by voters:

1. Ten additional white junior high school classrooms at a cost of $300,000.

2. A new gymnasium for the white Washington-Lee High School, plus 12 classrooms to be used for science purposes at a total cost of $750,000.

The School Board said that according to recent census figures, it would need about 28 new elementary classrooms in addition to the above by February, 1952. A new bond issue to cover that need probably will be requested in two years, board members said.

The school bond request came as Arlington school department authorities noted an enrollment increase in public schools this year more than 20 per cent above September, 1947.

Total enrollment on opening day this year was 12,266, with 7186 in white elementary schools alone. Last year's first-day enrollment totaled $10,069, with 6350 in white elementary schools.

Arlington Reports Higher Budget Balance

Arlington County yesterday announced expenditures totaling $6,407,959 against a $6,549,241 income for the fiscal year ended last June 30.

County Auditor Elmer Newell noted a June 30, 1948, balance of $922,276 to Arlington's credit compared with a balance of $780,995 at the beginning of the fiscal year.

Arlington Women Urged to Study County Budget

Mrs. Florence Cannon, only woman member on the Arlington County Board, urged Arlington's feminine residents to study the county budget as thoroughly as they would their household finances.

In an address to the Lyon Park Women's Club in the Lyon Park Community House (N. Filmore and Pershing dr.), Mrs. Cannon reminded the women that when they bought a new rug or heating plant "you expect to pay for them."

"Why assume that sidewalks, additional garbage collections, and additional recreation facilities can be provided without additional taxes?" she asked. Mrs. Cannon also urged that the organized political parties be discouraged from participation in elections for local offices so that Federal employes might take part. The latter are banned by the Hatch Act from party politics.

Restaurateur Shows Bad Aim In Shooting at Former Fiance

A 34-year-old restaurant operator yesterday walked up to the desk of his former girl friend as she worked, fired one shot at her from point blank range—and missed, police reported.

Less than a minute later he was nabbed by an off-duty policeman as he left the office building at 1244 5th st. ne. He surrendered without a struggle.

Police identified him as Ernest Rayburn, operator of Rayburn's Restaurant, 1727 North Capitol st. He was taken to the Ninth Precinct station and later charged with assault with intent to kill.

The girl, Miss Wavalene Samson, 22, 3300 17th st. ne., was taken to Casualty Hospital where she was admitted for shock. The bullet, which tore into the right corner of the desk under which she had ducked, missed her by 18 inches, police reported.

The near-tragedy took place shortly after 4 p. m. yesterday in a second floor office at the Phillips building, at the 5th st. ne. address, where Miss Samson is employed as a stenographer by Hugh Phillips, real estate firm.

Also in the office at the time were C. W. Thompson, and Milton R. Fisher, representatives of a flour concern, police reported.

According to Fisher, Miss Samson "ducked under the desk" as Rayburn approached. He "whipped out a gun," Fisher said, and fired one shot, which went wild.

Pvt. Penkert

At that point, Thompson related, Fisher got up from his desk and pushed him (Rayburn) out the door."

Meanwhile, Police Pvt. John A. Penkert, station clerk at No. 3 Precinct station, was across the street shopping with his wife. An unidentified woman came up to him, he said, and reported she had seen a man with a gun in his pocket.

Penkert crossed over to the Phillips Building entrance "just as the guy came out," he said. "I grabbed him and asked him, 'Where's that gun?'" the policeman said.

Rayburn surendered the gun without a struggle. "I'm not going to run away," he said. The policeman quoted Rayburn as saying he had "been going" with the girl for three years. "I'm tired of everything," Penkert said he told him.

Lieut. A. L. Embrey said Miss Samson had told him she had "taken Rayburn into court for threats" in the past.

One He Befriended

Cleric Loses Eye by Blow From Youth

The friendship of an Episcopal clergyman for a wayward Washington youth yesterday cost the Rev. James Land Ellis, 55, of 247 Delaware ave. sw., his right eye.

The youth, flaxen-haired George Junior Holt, 21, faced a charge of mayhem. He was placed under $3000 bond when he appeared in Municipal Court yesterday before Judge Aubrey B. Fennell.

Police said Holt struck his benefactor in the face with a 22-caliber bolt-action rifle during a tussle Wednesday night.

Detective E. E. Ernst of No. 4 Precinct, said the preacher was attempting to dissuade the boy from taking the rifle into the street when Holt struck him with the breech of the gun. Yesterday, in an emergency operation, doctors at Episcopal Eye, Ear and Throat Hospital removed his right eye. Deaconness Margaret Bechtol, superintendent, said his condition was "good."

According to Detective Ernst, Holt was placed in the custody of the clergyman about three years ago because of a lengthy juvenile record. About a year ago, the youth quit his job and since then Mr. Ellis, who is employed as instructor in Government letter writing at the Navy Department, has been supporting him, Ernst reported.

Recently, the detective said, Mr. Ellis found the boy a job as a surveyor's assistant. Holt worked Monday but didn't work the following day. On that day, Ernst said, he moved out.

The following night he turned up at the clergyman's home to pick up his rifle. Mr. Ellis urged him not to take the rifle to the street because he would get into trouble. There was an argument, and Mr. Ellis was struck.

Witnesses summoned police, the detective said, and Holt was arrested on the scene.

Judge Fennell appointed Attorney Harry S. Peikin to represent Holt.

4 Men Seized; Face Numbers Charges Today

Vice squad detectives arrested four men yesterday on numbers charges.

At 11:30 a. m., they stepped into Nick's Valet Shop, 3115 14th st. nw., arrested Stephen Ealey, 32, of 106 Canal st. sw., and the owner of the shop, Nick Ruggeri, 52, of 3805 13th st. nw.

Ealey was freed in $1500 bond after being charged with operating a lottery, possession of lottery slips and setting up a gaming table. Ruggeri was charged with permitting gaming and released in $500 bond.

Lieut. Roy Blick, head of the vice squad, said his men had the shop under observation for several days and that undercover men had made plays with Ealey.

A short time later, detectives arrested Robert Dunmore, 64, of 112 Canal st. sw., and Charles Davis, 56, of 353 G st. sw., on a parking lot in the 200 block of 4th st. sw. They were booked for operating and possession and released in $1500 bond each.

Police said numbers books were found in both men's pockets and that Dunmore was seized with marked money handed him my an undercover man.

All four men will be arraigned in Municipal Court today.

Revell Convicted Of Beauty Parlor Blackmail Effort

Merle Revell, 42, formerly residing at the Washington Hotel, was convicted by District Court jury yesterday of trying to blackmail a beauty parlor official here out of $25,000.

Judge Jennings Bailey committed Revell to District jail pending a presentence report by the probation office.

The intended victim of the blackmail attempt was Miller L. Wimer of 16 Channing st. nw. He is an official of Emile's, a Connecticut ave. concern, according to evidence.

According to the indictment, Revell pretended he was a Metropolitan policeman on April 4, wrongfully accused Wimer of sexual perversion and said he would need $25,000 for "bail." Wimer consulted his attorney and police were called into the case.

A codefendant, Theodore Self, 38, of New York, is still at large. The prosecutor was Assistant United States Attorney Arthur J. McLaughlin.

New Building For Children's Hospital Assured

Commissioners Also Approve Funds For Similar Unit At Gallinger

Actual construction of a new building for Children's Hospital was assured yesterday when the District Commissioners approved allotment of $598,000 of Federal funds to the project.

They also set aside $400,000 toward construction of a combined pediatrics crippled children's building and laboratory at Gallinger Hospital, and turned down a request by Dr. Henry G. Hadley for $283,000 to finish building a 60-bed hospital in the 4600 block of Nichols ave. se.

The allotments were made from the District's share of the 75-million-dollar fund created by the Hill-Burton Act, passed in 1946. These funds are distributed on the basis of $1 for every $2 raised by the hospital institutions involved.

Requirements Not Met

The request by Dr. Hadley was denied on the grounds that it failed to meet requirements of the Hill-Burton Act.

Yesterday's action completes more than two years of concentrated fund-raising activities by Children's Hospital supporters throughout Greater Washington. Funds for the hospital structure at 13th and W sts. nw., have resulted from children's lemonade stands, Pepco refunds, streetcar token refunds and a formal fund drive.

The institution, first hospital to apply for aid under the Hill-Burton Act, raised $1,316,000, its original goal, only to find that soaring construction costs made an additional $656,000 necessary.

This amount was asked for under the Federal act, and although scaled down to $598,000, James H. Lemon, acting chairman of the board of the hospital, said construction plans will go ahead.

Plans to be Drafted

He said six months will be required to draft working plans from the present preliminary ones and an additional two months for advertising for bids and awarding of a contract. Lemon expressed his appreciation to the Commissioners, Health Department and the Hospital Advisory Committee for approving the request.

The $400,000 designated for Gallinger will supplement $807,000 already appropriated for the combined building, which is expected to cost $2,050,000.

The Commissioners, after studying a request by the Health Department for an enlarged structure, directed Engineer Commissioner Gordon R. Young to study possibilities for adding facilities, such as another floor for rheumatic fever cases.

Commissioner Mason said he will ask Congress for additional funds to assure a start on the Gallinger building within the next year.

Raymond A. Kerns, 36, of Falls Church, Va., Capital Transit Co. motorman who faced manslaughter charges for the second time in seven months, was acquitted when the State failed to prove his street car was the one which struck and injured fatally George S. Skinner, 50, of 4308 30th st., Mount Rainier, Md., August 28, in the 4300 block of Rhode Island ave., Brentwood, Md. At the outset of the hearing, however, a spokesman for the tenants said agreement had been reached on a 5½ per cent increase in present rents, which range from $2.50 for a three-room unit to $115 for an eight-room unit. Mansfield took the compromise proposal under advisement.

Separated for 20 years, Dr. Clifford R. Anderson and the Rev. Ormond K. Anderson, 43-year-old twin brothers, were reunited yesterday in Takoma Park, Md.

'Prisoner's Song' Claimant, Vernon Dalhart, Succumbs

Bridgeport, Conn., Sept. 16 (AP).—Vernon Dalhart, who claimed he wrote the music to "The Prisoner's Song," one of the Nation's all-time song hits, died last night at Bridgeport Hospital after a long illness.

A pioneer recorder of American folk songs, Dalhart said he and his cousin, Guy Massey, composed the famous song that was to sell more than 25 million records about 25 years ago. The song is copyrighted in Massey's name.

Dalhart had been commissioned by the Victor Talking Machine Co. to record the folk song, "The Wreck of the 97," and found himself in need of a tune for the other side of the record.

He and Massey retired to a hotel room where Massey wrote the well known "If I had the wings of an angel" words and Dalhart wrote the music.

Dalhart was born Marion Try Slaughter, on a ranch near Texarkana, Tex. He studied voice at the Dallas Conservatory of Music, moving to New York on the recommendation of his teacher. It was then he assumed his professional name, derived from the names of two Texas towns.

Dalhart had been a recording star since the days of the old Edison records. Thomas A. Edison, himself, auditioned the singer and signed him to his first contract.

Dalhart retired in 1931 and moved to Bridgeport a few years later to be near his daughter. The daughter, Mrs. Lewis A. Shea of Westport, and his widow, Mrs. Sally Lee Slaughter, survive him.

Mrs. Garvey's husband was one of the organizers of the old Greenback Labor Party and figured prominently in activities of the Knights of Labor.

Mrs. McGarvey is survived by two daughters, Miss Sara A. McGarvey and Mrs. Anna A. Peifer, and two sons, Hugh T. McGarvey, jr., and Aloysius McGarvey, all of Washington.

Alexandria Back On Daylight Time After Time Out

It was suddenly discovered last week that the ordinance had ended daylight-saving time in the city September 6 instead of September 26.

Tired Kidneys Often Bring Sleepless Nights

Doctors say your kidneys contain 15 miles of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. When they get tired and don't work right in the daytime, many people have to get up nights. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder. Don't neglect this condition and lose valuable, restful sleep.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may also cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, a stimulant diuretic, used successfully by millions for over 50 years. Doan's give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

79 Are Rescued From Sinking Ships

New York, Sept. 16 (AP).—The Coast Guard and two merchant ships teamed up today in violent seas to rescue 79 seamen from two vessels in the hurricane-tossed North Atlantic. Seven men were believed lost.

Both rescues took place within a few hours. A badly listing British freighter was contacted 750 miles east of New York while a fishing craft, wallowing in the high seas, was reached about 390 miles northeast of the freighter.

The veteran Coast Guard cutter, Bibb, removed 40 crewmen from the Portuguese fishing schooner, Gaspar. One man was lost overboard from the Gaspar.

The American freighter, Cecil N. Bean, and the Argentine freighter, Tropero, took a total of 39 seamen from the sinking British freighter, Leicester. Six of the freighter's men were presumed lost.

Waves Smash Two Lifeboats

Battling the high waves and gale, 20 Leicester crewmen reached the Bean in lifeboats while 19 others, including the freighter's captain, H. N. Lawson, were taken aboard the Tropero in similar fashion.

A Coast Guard spokesman said the Bibb was headed back to its base in Argentia, Newfoundland. The spokesman added that the Gaspar will be destroyed, if its captain permits because of its menace to navigation.

It was not established whether the Leicester crewmen reached the other vessels in their own boats or were taken off by rescue lifeboats.

However, Capt. Edward Serafin of Norfolk, Va., on his maiden voyage as commander of the Cecil N. Bean, reported two of his motor lifeboats smashed by towering waves. Owned by the U. S. Maritime Commission, the Bean is chartered to the Fall River Navigation Co.

Captain Serafin said the Bean, beating through the hurricane track in ballast from England for New Orleans, saw the Leicester's distress rockets late last night.

Heaving to, the Bean stood by until dawn when the hazardous task of picking up the Leicester's men began. None of his crew was injured. One Leicester crewman suffered a minor scalp injury.

Captain Lawson said the Leicester was struck by the hurricane Tuesday night. She was in sand ballast out of London for New York to pick up a general cargo for Australia.

The Leicester listed to 55 degrees, Lawson reported to the London owners, the New Zealand Shipping Co.

As Captain Serafin swung the Bean toward Bermuda with the rescued men, he reported the Leicester was continuing to list "and is expected to capsize momentarily."

Vessel a Rich Prize

However, the Leicester still was considered a rich prize, free under maritime laws to be taken by any company whose men boarded her. Halifax shipping sources reported that several vessels were racing through the battering seas to take her. In the daring race were two little Halifax tugs.

The Portuguese schooner Gaspar, also struck by the northward-speeding hurricane, was leaking badly, her master said.

The Bibb, skippered by Capt. D. J. Jacobs, former commander of the Coast Guard's International Ice Patrol, last October 14 rescued 69 persons from the Bermuda Sky Queen after the big flying boat made a forced landing on the Atlantic 820 miles east of Newfoundland.

Suspicious Areas Probed In Hurricane Belt

Miami, Fla., Sept. 16 (U.P.).—Wary weathermen today dispatched reconnaissance planes to two new "suspicious areas" in the tropical hurricane belt.

One area, the Weather Bureau said, was in the extreme northwestern Gulf, about 150 miles from the Texas mainland, near latitude 27 north, and longitude 95 west. The other was in the extreme southeastern Bahamas.

Sloan Murder Charge Cut to Manslaughter

A murder charge against Anson Merrick Sloan, 39, a telephone repairman of 403 Belford pl., Hampshire Knolls, Md., yesterday were reduced to manslaughter.

Sloan had been charged with murder in the death of his wife, Florence M., 42, August 31, at their home after an alleged argument. Bruises resembling finger marks were observed on her throat, her right eye was blackened and both lips were cut, police reported.

Through Attorney Dudley Digges of Upper Marlboro, Sloan yesterday pleaded not guilty to manslaughter in Hyattsville Police Court and waived preliminary hearing. He was held for action of the Prince Georges County grand jury by Trial Magistrate Alan Bowie, who fixed bond at $2500.

Sloan, previously held without bond on the murder charge, made bond later in the day and was released.

Mistress of Lavish Chicago 'House' Dies in Retirement

New York, Sept. 16 (NYHT).—Minna Everleigh, 70, coowner of Chicago's most fabulous seraglio at the turn of the century, died today in the Park West Hospital, after living quietly in New York under an assumed name for 35 years.

Although the Everleigh Club, at 2131-33 S. Dearborn st., was a Chicago landmark from 1900 to 1911 for thousands of playboys, politicians and wealthy cattlemen, Miss Everleigh and her sister Ada lived most of their lives behind a mask of gentility, and only a few intimates knew of their identity in recent years. They had buried the past, they said, and they wanted people to think the Everleigh sisters were dead.

Their club was known as the most elegant (and expensive) "sporting house" west of Paris. "It's a recommendation to say you worked here," Miss Everleigh used to tell the fashionably gowned girls who entertained guests in its perfumed air.

There was even a 1000-volume library for guests who wished to pass a quiet evening.

When the club was closed in a reform wave in 1911, Miss Everleigh and her sister toured Europe. The building where they had been such successful hostesses was torn down in 1933.

The sisters lived inconspicuously in a West Side residence here amid such souvenirs of the Chicago days as several oil paintings, a gold piano, brass and mahogany beds and an estimated $100,000 worth of diamonds. Their chief diversions were going to the theater and writing poetry.

Miss Everleigh was always reticent about her past. Born on July 13, 1878, in Virginia of a prominent but unidentified "first family," she left home to become a trouper in a wildcat road show. After an unhappy marriage and a brief apprenticeship during the nineties in Omaha's wide-open red-light district, she came to Chicago with her sister on February 1, 1900, with 35,000 in cash and an idea for a new kind of millionaire's club.

Within a few months the Everleigh sisters were operating an establishment famed for its demure and ladylike hostesses, its string orchestra and its floor shows.

The sisters rode to church in fine carriages, and they left Chicago without a police record.

Miss Ada Everleigh, who is two years older than her sister and who has been her lifelong companion, recently suffered a broken leg and is confined to her home.

In a biography of the Everleigh sisters, Charles Washburn, a newspaperman, claims that, as they prepared to leave for Rome, "Big Jim" Colosimo assured them that the reform movement would blow over in a few months, and Alderman "Bathhouse John" Coughlin said he would use his influence.

But the sisters had made a million dollars and they were quitting. "Do the best you can boys," shouted Minna from the observation platform of the train.

Lawyer Charges Infraction by U. S. Attorney's Office

The United States Attorney's office was charged with "either violating or circumventing the law" yesterday by an attorney representing an alleged numbers writer.

The charge was made to Judge Aubrey B. Fennell in Municipal Court by Lawyer Curtis Mitchell after United States Attorney Harold Bacon moved for a two-week continuance to allow the District Grand Jury to act on the case.

Mitchell contended that his client, Alvin Jeter, 43, of 1768 U st. n.w., was not being given his "right to a speedy trial or to a prompt arraignment." Jeter is charged with operating a lottery and possession of numbers slips.

Judge Fennell granted the continuance despite Mitchell's contention that the delay would be "prejudicial" to his client. The official record shows that Jeter was arrested in July and has had three postponements of his arraignment.

Station Bootlegger Wins 115th Court Action in Year

David Douglas Davenport, 32, oft-charged but seldom-convicted Union Station bootlegger, won another case yesterday in Municipal Court.

In his 115th court appearance in about a year, Davenport was charged with vagrancy. He won the case on a motion to quash the charge.

According to the information charged in the case, Davenport was charged with wandering aoout "the Union Station at late or unusual hours without any visible or lawful business and not giving a good account of himself" between June and September 2.

But, argued defense attorney Saul G. Lichtenberg, the District's vagrancy statute specifies that the vagrant must be found wandering aroupd "the streets" and not in buildings.

Judge Ellen K. Raedy threw out the case.

Meanwhile, pending against Davenport are several bootlegging charges.

Neptune Opens Two-Day Court At National Seafood Festival

Hampton, Va., Sept. 16 (AP).—King Neptune left his undersea realm today to hold court for the two days of the first National Seafood Festival.

The god of the sea rode on his royal barge with several of his favorite subjects—Davy Jones, Black Beard, Paul Jones, Jean Lafitte, Cristopher Columbus, Cortez and Admiral Peary.

Barging ashore also were several pretty girls, rigged out to resemble choice morsels of Neptune's kingdom—a fish, a crab, a clam, an oyster, a lobster and a scallop.

Evoking most comment from the thousand or so persons assembled at Kecoughtan for the brief bit of pageantry was a pretty blonde wearing three clam shells. The excitement subsided when she turned her back, however, because then you could see she was wearing a two-piece bathing suit under the clam shells.

Neptune was played by a giant, Capt. Emmett W. Cox, provost marshal at nearby Fort Monroe. Davy Jones and the other members of Neptune's court were played by Hampton men.

Neptune wore a long, green robe covered with small shells; a god crown topped his long white hair. He carried a trident.

When the odd-looking assortment of creatures came ashore from the barge, Neptune presented his credentials to Hampton's Mayor George C. Bentley, who presented Neptune a king-sized gold key to the city.

The National Seafood Festival is sponsored by the Hampton Junior Women's Club as a salute to the community's seafood industry.

Blue-plate notables here for the festival include Virginia's Gov. William M. Tuck and Maryland's Gov. William Preston Lane, jr. They arrived this afternoon on Lane's yacht Potomac. Observing a temporary truce in the decades-old warfare over seafood between Virginia and Maryland, the two Governors tonight attended a banquet at which Lane commissioned Tuck an "admiral of Chesapeake Bay."

The banquet was given in honor of a score of princesses attending the festival's Queen Lorelei, enchantress of the sea. The Queen, whose coronation will take place Friday, is Corky Crowley, a tall brunette photographer's model from Dallas, Tex., via New York.

Tonight's festival events included sailboat races by floodlight in Hampton Creek, a horse show at Hilton Village, and a dance in a plane hangar at the Langley Air Force base.

Friday's events will include power boat races in Hampton Creek, a tour of Seafood plants, an outdoor seafood feast, a festival parade, coronation of Queen Lorelei, a talk by Senator A. Willis Robertson, a cocktail party, a horse show, and another dance at Langley Air Force base.

Princesses in the queen's court are Charlotte Anne Phillips, Cambridge, Md.; Anne Darden Joyner, Suffolk; Mrs. Shirley Richardson, Virginia Beach; Claudia Norsworthy, Phoebus; Margaret Saunders, Suffolk; Hilda Robbins, Gloucester; Ann Adams, Elizabeth City County; Jo Ann Stuart, Newport News; Barbara Spencer, Cape Charles; Allen Carter Rohleder, Norfolk; Myra Anne Fitchett, Mathews County; Katie Lawrence, Isle of Wight County; Jacquelin Ann Moody, James City County; Patsy Warren, Accomack County; Carolyn Leonard, Baltimore; Margaret Pitchford, Warwick County; Sue Bentley, Hampton; Mrs. Ann Showell, Ocean City, Md.; Betty Virginia Joyner, Smithfield; Betty Amory, York County; and Bobby Joe Wilson, Hillsville.

Bernadotte Sees Arabs, Jews as 'Trigger Happy'

Damascus, Syria, Sept. 16. (AP).—Count Folke Bernadotte said tonight Arab and Jewish soldiers in Jerusalem are "trigger happy."

To illustrate his contention that the fighting in the Holy City is "not too serious," the United Nations Palestine mediator said at a news conference:

"It's like this: They shoot into the dark at night. They snipe by daylight. Excuse me, but it is a most idiotic thing." Then he added they are just "trigger happy."

Alumni Can't See Tar Heels Losing

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

CHAPEL HILL, N. C., Sept. 16.—If North Carolina goes through an undefeated football season, Coach Carl Snavely will be "absolutely astonished."

If the Tar Heels don't, the alumni will be.

Snavely

The taciturn Shavely admits he has a "fine squad," but that's as far as he'll go in appraising what Carolina alumni declare to be the best crop of performers they've ever assembled at Chapel Hill.

Even today, almost two weeks before Carolina tackles a murderous schedule, some of the more rabid old grads are already making plans to spend New Year's in New Orleans, home of oysters Rockefeller and the Sugar Bowl football game.

But the Tar Heels who are all excited over Carolina don't mention it to Snavely, who isn't looking quite that far ahead. All he can see is September 25 when he envisions a leathery herd of Texas Longhorns stampeding his poor little Tar Heels.

"They beat us 34-0 last year and they're capable of doing it again September 25," moaned the dour Dutchman from Lebanon Valley.

Snavely doesn't actually feel that way, of course, and even if he did, he'd have a heck of a time trying to make the Carolina constituents believe him.

They point to a squad of 54 which includes 34 lettermen back from last year's team which was rated by many coaches only behind Notre Dame and Michigan by November of 1947.

SNAVELY'S GOT 'em from everywhere. His single-wing disciples hail from such little dots on the map as Holidays Cove, W. Va., and Nesquehoning, Pa. More than 40 of the boys are out-of-staters, but Snavely & Co. are making 'em Tar Heel-bred as fast as they can.

The prize package of the many prize packages here is once again Charlie Justice, the 175-pound Asheville, N. C., junior who is showing his best form since his freshman year.

"He's a nice boy to have on the squad," said Snavely of the triple-threat Choo-Choo boy. This can be taken to mean that Justice is the finest back Snavely has ever coached or seen. Three years ago when the Tar Heels outbid everybody for the 24-year-old swiftie and he finally enrolled at Carolina, the overjoyed Snavely said:

"I hope he comes out for football."

Mr. Justice will pass, run and kick for the Tar Heels. There are three other tailbacks listed on the roster, but they'll just fill out uniforms. Justice is the offensive show here. He's the lad who was chiefly responsible for Carolina's football receipts soaring to an all-time high of $250,000 last year; he's the fellow the football-mad Tar Heels pay to see play and he's the operator who'll take Carolina wherever they're going this year.

To help Justice with the running and passing attack, there's 190-pound Fullback Hosea Rodgers, who moved the marker 8.2 yards every time he rammed his way through the line last year, when he was only a second-string fullback to the departed Walt Pupa.

SPELLING RODGERS will be Billy Hayes, 175-pound sophomore from Arlington, Va., who was one of Justice's practically idle understudies last year. They're high on the former W-L High boy here. Wingback Johnny Clements is back to run the Snavely reverses and Don Hartig is around once again to block for Justice & Co.

When you speak of teams here you must be specific. Do you mean offensive or defensive teams? There are several of each, you see.

Junior Art Weiner, 215 and 6-foot-4, is the best offensive end. Senior Mike Rubish, 200 pounds and 6-3, will do the pass catching on the other flank. Former Marine Ted Hazelwood, 238, and Lennie Szafaryn, a piddling 230-pounder, are the offensive tackles while Sid Varney and Larry Klosterman, considered "merely brilliant" last year, will be at guards when the Tar Heels have the ball.

Dan Stiegman, 199, and Al Bernot, 204, are the best of the four centers around, which means they're pretty good.

The defensive alignment includes a host of boys who are fast and sure tacklers. Senior Chan Highsmith, who broke his back playing center in the final game of the year in 1947, is back, but as a tackle this time. His 216 pounds won't handicap the team any and if Snavely really wants to put up a beef about anything, he can use 304-pound Stan Marczyk at tackle, and probably will.

As one Carolina rooter put it:

"Our folks want to see good football."

And they will.

Chesnes Has It Rough but Pirates Win

New York, Sept. 16 (AP).—Bob Chesnes, rookie righthander from the Pacific Coast League, survived a five-run fifth inning and pitched the Pittsburgh Pirates to a 10-6 victory over the New York Giants today.

Ed Brockman, substitute third baseman, paced the Pirates' 18-hit attack off five pitchers with a triple and three singles. The triumph cut Boston's first-place margin over the Bucs to 4½ games.

Del Webb Says 'Bosh' to Stories That Yankees Plan to Fire Harris

Phoenix, Ariz., Sept. 16 (AP).—Del Webb, co-owner of the New York Yankees, today termed as so much "bosh" any reports that Bucky Harris is on his way out as manager of the club.

Webb, a Phoenix contractor, returned here yesterday after a hurried trip East. It was reported he went back to confer with Dan Topping, his partner in the Yankee ownership, and George Weiss, general manager of the club.

WEBB, however, flew back to Phoenix and spiked the rumors of Harris being on the way out. He said as far as he knows there is no indication of a change for Harris now or next year.

"We're trying to win a pennant," Webb went on, "and would appreciate being left alone by these people who start untrue stories."

Nats Lose 16th In Row, 6-3, on Doby's Homer

Cleveland, Sept. 16.—The Washington Nats made it 16 losses in a row here last night, bowing to the Cleveland Indians, 6-3, on Larry Doby's first-inning home run with the bases full.

The Tribe's triumph enabled them to gain a full game on first-place Boston and a half game on the second-place Yankees

Doby, who had been out for a week with an injured left hand, erased a good start for the Nats, who had scored two runs in the first against Gene Bearden. Bearden won his fifteenth game and five of those have been over Washington.

Sid Hudson and successor, Dick Welteroth, pitched good ball after the Tribe's five-run first inning, but the Senators could do little to even matters, although Carden Gillenwater bashed a home run, his third, in the third inning.

Near League Record

The Senators now are within four games of the American League losing record, which was last set by the Athletics in 1943.

For a few, pleasant minutes it seemed like they were going to end this sordid string. Ed Yost opened the game with a double and he scored on a combination of Al Kozar's single and a muff at the plate by Catcher Jim Hegan. Kozar went to second on this miscue and scored on Ed Stewart's single to right.

The lead was short-lived. Hudson saw to that as he dug the foundation for his sixteenth defeat of the year.

Doby came up, still wearing tape on his left thumb. Doby, earlier in the year, hit a record home run off Hudson in Washington, one that struck the public address horns on top of the center field fence.

Feller Goes Today

This time he hit one just about 400 feet, over the fence in right center. It was his twelfth of the year and 133d for the Indians, who lead the league in these things.

Hudson and Dick Welteroth were more than adequate after that, although Sid gave up another run before he went out in the seventh.

Bearden was not at top form, but he got by with 7 hits as the Indians rang up 10. Gillenwater's home run was a respectable smash into the left field seats.

With two games left here, the Indians are now 14-6 with the Senators for the 1948 schedule. The Tribe, still gunning for the pennant, will fire Bob Feller at the Kuhel Kids tomorrow.

Yanks Lose 2-1, Then Win, 8 to 4

Detroit, Sept. 16 (AP).—Rallying from the verge of a costly double defeat, the second place New York Yankees came back to gain an even split in today's double-header with the Detroit Tigers, taking the nightcap 8 to 4 after losing the opener 2 to 1.

Throttled with only four hits by Freddie Hutchinson in the first game, when the Tigers beat their ace, Vic Raschi, the Yanks fell behind 3-0 in the first two innings of the second game and still trailed 4-3 as late as the seventh inning.

Then New York batting power asserted itself when a walk and two singles tied the score and Johnny Lindell slammed a two-run pinch double against the top of the leftfield screen.

Lefty Joe Page, who relieved Allie Reynolds in the fifth and allowed just three hits the rest of the way, tripled home the last two New York runs in the eighth.

Even in defeat the Yanks came in for special distinction in the first game.

Joe DiMaggio's fourth-inning home run, high into the upper deck in leftfield, was the 300th of his 10-year major league career and thirty-sixth of this year.

The eighth major leaguer to achieve such swatting fame, the Yankee clipper put his name with those of such sluggers as Babe Ruth, Jimmy Foxx, Lou Gehrig, Mel Ott, Rogers Hornsby, Chuck Klein and Hank Greenberg as the only 300-homer men in baseball history.

St. Louis Beats Boston On Fannin's Seven-Hitter

St. Louis, Sept. 16 (AP).—The St. Louis Browns defeated Boston's high-flying Red Sox here tonight, 3-1, cutting Boston's American League lead over the New York Yankees to one game.

The Yankees split an afternoon double-header with the Detroit Tigers.

The Red Sox also lost a full game to the third-place Cleveland Indians, who defeated the Washington Nats, 6-3. The Indians now trail Boston by 2½ games.

Cliff Fannin held the Red Sox scoreless until the ninth inning and allowed only seven hits.

The Browns rapped Mel Parnell in each of the first seven innings for a total of 11 hits.

Parnell was ineffective from the start and with Fannin pitching red hot ball the Red Sox were baffled.

Rookie Don Lund started the St. Louis scoring with a home run in the second and went on for a perfect night at bat, adding a double and two singles, one of which scored Al Zarilla in the third. Whitey Platt touched Parnell for another home run in the seventh, blasting the first pitch into the left-field bleachers.

Ted Williams got a double and a single in three times at bat. It was his double in the ninth which started the business that robbed Fannin of a shutout. A single by Wally Moses moved Williams to third and Bill Goodman's bunt sent Williams home.

The game ended with a thrill. Boston had the tying runs on first and second base with two out when Birdie Tebbetts slammed a line drive straight at Shortstop Eddie Pellagrini and above his head. Pellagrini jumped for the ball, juggled it for a moment, but held on for the game-ending out.

Black 'Much Brighter,' Kept on Danger List

Cleveland, Sept. 16 (AP).—Pitcher Don Black of the Cleveland Indians appeared "much brighter" today, Charity Hospital reported, but he still is on the danger list.

"I'm rather heartened by Don's condition," said Dr. Spencer Braden, the specialist consulted after Black suffered a hemorrhage near the brain Monday afternoon in a game with the St. Louis Browns.

"The whole picture looks brighter now. The problem now is to stop recurrence of bleeding, but Don will face a long period of convalescence."

Meet Bears Sunday

'Skins Swap Tackle Williamson For Hartley, Rookie Halfback

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

The Washington Redskins did a bit of bragging and made a confession, all in one deal, yesterday as they prepared for Sunday's fourth annual Variety Club charity game with the Chicago Bears in Baltimore.

In a straight player trade, the local pros gave the New York Giants Tackle Ernie Williamson in exchange for Halfback Howard Hartley.

They thus indicated supreme confidence in the middle of their line, where the tackle spot in previous years has been under-manned, and at the same time admitted they were willing to give up a seasoned player to fill a yawning gap at halfback.

Williamson, former North Carolina star, is starting his second year of N. F. L. football, while Hartley, a former Duke sprint man, is a rank rookie in the pro league. He is 23 years old, weighs 185 pounds and stands an even 6 feet tall. At Duke he ran the 100-yard dash consistently under 10 seconds.

Hartley will report here today and very likely will see action Sunday, filling one of the spots left vacant by the injured Howie Livingston, Eddie Saenz and Dick Todd. He is called a "good all-round player," so the Redskins have high hopes he can be of help in pass defense.

Dodgers Whip Redlegs, 12-6

Brooklyn, Sept. 16 (AP). — The Brooklyn Dodgers kept their pennant hopes alive today by defeating Cincinnati, 12-6.

It was Brooklyn's eighteenth win in 22 starts against the Reds this season and moved them into clear possession of third place over the idle St. Louis Cardinals.

Kayoed Fighter Hospitalized

Philadelphia, Sept. 16 (AP).—Bill (Chicken) Thompson was hurried to the Naval Hospital tonight after he was knocked out by Johnny Haynes, 210-pound New Yorker.

Haynes flattened Thmopson just three seconds before the end of the eighth and final round of their featured heavyweight bout at Toppi Stadium.

Dr. Joseph I. Levy, State athletic commission physician, and Dr. Michael Primiani were unable to bring the 21-year-old Negro out of his daze and ordered him sent to the hospital.

His condition was given as "serious." He suffered what apparently was a severe concussion when a head blow felled him and droe him partially through the ropes.

Joe Louis Arrives In Town Today

Joe Louis checks in town this afternoon and will go through the motions of working out for his 6-round exhibition with Pat Comiskey Monday night at Griffith Stadium.

The heavyweight champ, who weighed 213½ when he knocked out Jersey Joe Walcott in Yankee Stdium last June, reportedly weighs only 202. His summer-long golfing campaign has kept him in excellent shape.

Baltimore Colts Beat Yankees For Second Time, 27 to 14

New York, Sept. 16 (AP).—The Baltimore Colts, displaying an effective one-two punch in Y. A. Tittle and Billie Hillenbrand, trounced the New York Yankees, 27 to 14, tonight.

A crowd of 18,959 saw the 1947 Eastern Division champions of the All-America Football Conference lost their third game of the current season and their second to Baltimore.

The triumph consolidated the rebuilt Colts' hold on the Eastern Division lead with a record of two games won and one lost.

Outplayed in the early part of the game when Spec Sanders scored the first of his two Yankee touchdowns, the Colts rallied behind a superior line and Tittle's clever T-formation quarterbacking to take full command in the second half.

Trailing by a touchdown after Sanders completed a 66-yard Yankee drive in the first quarter, the Colts tied it up at 14:55 of the second period. Bob "Stormy" Pfohl, stormed across after Tittle had completed a 23-yard pass to Wendell Williams on the two-yard line. A Tittle-to-Hillenbrand pass, with the former Indiana ace running 39 yards, put the Colts ahead in the third period.

Two field goals by Rex Grossman and a touchdown by John North completed Baltimore's scoring in the final period before Sanders again hit pay dirt. North, a 27-year-old freshman end from Vanderbilt, played a whale of a defensive game and climaxed it by grabbing the ball when Sanders was smeared on a pass and galloped 47 yards.

Besides handling the ball beautifully under center, Tittle, former Louisiana State star, completed 10 of 18 passes for 241 yards. Hillenbrand a shifty, speedy runner, caught five of them to gain 143 yards and also picked up 72 yards by rushing. In all, the Colts gained 413 yards to the Yankees' 346.

Yanks, Packers Open Season

Boston, Sept. 17 (U.P.).—The Boston Yankees, improved and smarting over the setback they've suffered in their last 45 National Football League starts, will be hosts tomorrow night as they open the 1948 loop season in a meeting with the powerful Green Bay Packers.

Under the coaching of Maurice (Clipper) Smith, who hopes to end Owner Ted Collins' string of losses on the field and financially, the Yankees this year are well fortified in one position, anyway.

At quarterback they have Jimmy Youel and Roy Zimmermen, both former members of the Washington Redskins, and Frank (Boley) Dancewicz. The latter is slightly injured right now and may see limited action.

New York	7	0	0	7—14

New York: Touchdowns—Sanders (2). Points after touchdowns—Johnson, 2 (placements).
Baltimore: Touchdowns—Pfohl, Hillenbrand, North. Points after touchdowns—Grossman, 3 (placements); Field goals—Grossman, 2 (placements).

Favorites Beaten in Late Races

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Bel Air, Md., Sept. 16.—Favorite players, who rolled easily through the first three races today and cashed among other things a $19.40 payoff on the daily double, ran into a brick wall later in the program.

Long shots popped with regularity and among them was J. H. Whitley's Flying John who turned a flip flop to win at $23.20 in the featured Delta Purse.

Flying John, winner of five races this year, turned in a poor effort in his previous outing in a field of cheap platers. Today, however, was another day and he charged home to make it two wins for the afternoon for Apprentice Jimmy Ulmer, an Elloree, S. C., lad who began his career at Charles Town.

W. C. Greer's Dawndale was second with R. Finns Mix Man third in the limit field of ten going a mile and 70 yards. The weather was ideal for the sport which drew some 6000 fans. Flying John, who chose to fly today, was clocked in 146.

Mix Man and Markless battled most of the way for the pacemaking honors but had little left at the end. Dawndale moved on the inside and Flying John came on the outside. The latter, an 8-year-old, had his punch and held Dawndale safe at the end.

In the fifth race preceding the feature, R. Winchester's In Debt got some scattered fans out of debt with a smashing victory at a $38.60 mutuel. Jockey Mike Sarno brought the filly along and she led Liberty Lin and Royal Rogue to the wire, running the six and a half furlongs in 121.

A. T. Taylor's Thalia Lad proved just what the favorite players ordered with a $5.60 victory and G. S. Fockler's Sand Rose was a sweet thing in the second at $4.60. This pair teamed up in the 2-and-5 daily double.

P. A. Rothfuss' Barb Foot proved a worthy favorite in the third race under good handling by Jockey Jimmy Rankin and got home on schedule at $6.20.

From that point, the longshots and semi-longshots took over.

The sharp curves of the six-furlong track proved too much for Sky Pattern, a 2-year-old filly in the third race today.

Sky Pattern got around the first three turns under prodding from Jockey Stanley Austin. The skittish juvenile who had never raced at a small track before, refused to make the turn for home, however.

She ran straight into the outside rail and pitched Austin over the fence. He rolled 15 feet down a grassy embankment. Neither the jockey nor thoroughbred was injured.

Haas Scores 65 For Tacoma Lead

Tacoma, Sept. 16 (AP).—Fred Haas, jr., of New Orleans, racked up a six-under-par 65 today to lead the way in the first round of the $12,500 Tacoma Open Golf Tournament.

Right at his heels were Chuck Congdon, the hometown hope, with 66, and Dick Ghezzi of Englewood, N. J., with 67.

GW High Opens Against Mt. Vernon Tonight; Youngsters Key to Coolidge's Title Hopes

Colts Boast 15-Year Old Who Can Pass 60 Yards

Calvin Coolidge's Colts, who lost their two-year grip on the interhigh football title last year, are hoping to make the same kind of comeback as their pro namesakes, the Baltimore Colts.

They are at a disadvantage, though."

The other teams in the public high league aren't throwing material Coolidge's way, like the All-America Conference teams did during the off-season to try to build up the Baltimore pros.

So, Coolidge Coach Gil Conn, with most of his veterans gone, is starting from scratch, trying to develop his youngest prospects.

The bright young prospect is 15-year-old Arnold Tranen, a speedy halfback, who can throw a football over 60 yards. The cocky youngster is elbowing his way into the Coolidge backfield alongside Chuck Davis, George Turner, Jack Brosnan and Benny Duvall, all of whom saw some action last year.

Kirby Gallagher, converted from guard, and Dan Richardson, both up from the junior varsity, show promise in the Colt backfield.

Back with a year's experience and a varsity letter are Linemen Ralph Sheaffer, Paul Allen and Don Helfter.

Two very big linemen, "Tiny" Colburn, a 250-pound tackle, and Buzzy Culler, a 190-pound guard, will give the Coolidge forward wall that needed lift in weight. Marshall Friedman is expected to be the No. 1 choice for the center post, although Conn has emphasized that every position on the team is still wide open.

Passer Potts, Plunger Via Pace President's Attack

George Washington High of Alexandria is counting on its baseball battery of Ted Potts and Bobby Via to carry it to its second straight Northern Virginia League football championship.

Appropriately, Pitcher Potts is the team's No. 1 passer, and one of the best punters in local schoolboy ranks.

Catcher Via, Potts' halfback running mate, is the Presidents' workhorse, the reliable line plunger who gets the needed first down yardage.

These two lads and three veteran ends Billy Smith, Don Hanback and Pete Wedel, will spearhead the Presidents in their home opener tonight at 8 against Mount Vernon of Alexandria.

The Presidents will present a strong first team. If it can elude too many injuries during the season, it should equal last year's record of seven wins, two losses and a tie.

Their main weaknesses are at one tackle and one guard position where several untried and light youngsters are the leading candidates. Until more newcomers put a few games under their belts, the reserve situation is a question mark.

Rounding out Coach Bus Mackey's backfield will be Buzzy Harris at fullback and Sol Block at blocking back. Earl Dixon, 215-pound second team man last year, will hold down one tackle spot with 190-pound Bill Sweeney at a guard position.

At center is 160-pound Ralph Phillips. Leading candidates for the open tackle and guard jobs are Alden Packard, 175, and Frank Kavaljian, 135.

W-L Inaugurates Lighting System Against Western

Western High helps Washington-Lee of Arlington dedicate its new lighting system in the feature high school game tonight at 8 p. m. at W-L Stadium.

Dr. Barnard Joy, chairman of the Arlington school board, will throw the switch lighting the stadium, which has been enlarged to seat 6000. Ten members of the first Washington-Lee High football team, fielded in 1926, will be present. Among the former players on hand will be Elwood Clements, Arlington sheriff, and Denman Rucker, Arlington Commonwealth attorney.

Other games today—Georgetown Prep at Woodrow Wilson, 3:15 p. m.; Central at John Marshall of Richmond, 8 p. m.; Mount Vernon of Alexandria at George Washington of Alexandria, 8 p. m.; Sidwell Friends at Longwood Prep of Olney, Md., 3 p. m.; Roosevelt at Martinsburg, W. Va., 8 p. m.

Rice, Black Take Doubles

Austin Rice and H. L. Black won the doubles title yesterday with a 6-8, 6-2, 6-4 margin over Stewart Teaze and W. Pressinger in the finals of the Veterans' Tennis Tournament at Army-Navy Country Club.

The only singles match of the day saw Jack Potter gain the finals with a 6-2 margin over F. E. Ordway.

New Car Sales Up 13% Here In 8 Months

By S. Oliver Goodman

Washington sales of new autos totaled 19,578 for the first eight months this year, an increase of 13.7 per cent over the same period last year. The figure includes passenger cars and trucks.

August sales here numbered 2696, slightly higher than the previous month's 2669 and 39 per cent more than in August, 1947. The totals were reported yesterday by the Washington Automotive Trade Association.

Except for June, every month this year has shown a substantial increase in new car sales over the previous year. Unfilled orders, however, still remain heavy on local dealers books with the wait period for deliveries ranging as high as 18 months in some instances.

INNOVATION: The Washington Stock Exchange yesterday formally asked the Securities and Exchange Commission for unlisted trading privileges in Virginia Electric & Power Co. common and preferred stocks. If the application is approved, Vepco shares will be quoted and traded on the local exchange during the full five-hour session recently inaugurated by the market to cover dually listed issues. Vepco shares also are traded on the New York Stock Exchange and are widely held in Washington and nearby Maryland and Virginia counties. This is the first time in the 67-year history of the local exchange that unlisted trading privileges in a stock are being sought.

This compared with the prewar peak of $48,500,000,000 in 1929.

Try to Recover Public Good Will, Auto Dealers Told

Banff, Alberta, Sept. 16 (AP).—The biggest hole in the car dealer's roof is bad public relations and it needs repairs now, according to J. R. Davis, Ford Motor Co. sales and advertising director.

In an address prepared for delivery to the Federation of Automobile Dealer Associations, Davis said that unless the automobile business can recover the public good will it enjoyed before the war "we are all due for a good drenching."

He predicted the present buyers' market should last another 18 months to two years and added that United States production (of cars and trucks) in 1948 will be probably less next year because of steel shortages.

"When a customer gets mad," the Ford executive said, "he can do a lot of very effective advertising in reverse. He tells everyone of his gripe. Many customers write letters to the company." Among their complaints against dealers, Davis said were:

"Selling cars out of rotation; demanding trade-ins; giving low allowances on trade-ins; demanding under-the-counter premiums; loading cars with unwanted accessories; asking high prices; refusing to take orders and treating customers discourteously in general."

DuPont to License Many of Patents

Wilmington, Del., Sept. 16 (AP).—The Dupont Company announced today it is listing a number of its patents on the patent register of the United States Patent Office as available for licensing.

The company said 4,260 patents, about two thirds of those it owns and covering many phases of its operations, have been submitted. First official listing of the patents is expected to appear in an early issue of the Patent Office Gazette.

The company said study of its patents will be continued to determine what additional listings may be made. The present list was compiled from patents granted since January 1, 1933.

Fire Alarm Control Room Flares Again

The battle over who controls the District's fire alarm system—with Chief Clement Murphy in one corner and Herbert A. Friede, communications superintendent, in the other—flared up again yesterday.

Municipal Architect Merrel A. Coe disclosed that Friede has refused to hook wires into the ordinary street box type of alarm that Chief Murphy intends to install at the projected Birney School, scheduled for erection at Nichols ave. and Sumner rd. se.

The matter, after Coe was "unable to get an answer" to it, was referred to Lieut. Col. L. E. Cox, assistant Engineer Commissioner. Yesterday Cox said he expects to make a decision "one way or another" within a week.

Regardless of what Cox rules, Chief Murphy said he would install the street type box at the school. Under the District electrical code, the kind of signal system used is determined by the fire chief. Up until early 1947, however, control of the kind of alarms was Friede's responsibility.

Friede, who could not be reached for comment yesterday, favors installation at the school of a "remote control" box, a device manufactured almost exclusively by the Gamewell Co., it was learned.

District of Columbia Communications Superintendent Friede lost control of District fire alarms after the Gamewell Co. was indicated in Boston for alleged monopolistic practices by a Federal grand jury.

Portable Video With Tiny Screen Sells for $99.50

New York, Sept. 16 (AP).— A television set selling for less than $100 made its appearance on the New York markets today.

It is a 15-pound portable set with a 3-inch picture tube made by the Pilot Radio Corp. of Long Island City, N. J., retailing for $99.50. The set produces a picture slightly less than 6 square inches in area compared with 52 square inches for sets with 10-inch viewing tubes and 26 square inches for models with 7-inch tubes.

Pilot officials said the new set was not intended for viewing by groups but was designed as a "candid, personal set" for use on a desk, in a bedroom, a child's room or for invalids. They added that an attached antenna eliminated the need for special installation.

Receiver Is Sought For National Airlines

New York, Sept. 16 (AP).—A stockholder sought in Federal Court yesterday to have a temporary and permanent receiver named for the National Airlines, Inc., because, she alleged, the company's president caused losses "in excess of one million dollars" by refusing to negotiate a pilots' strike.

The suit, filed by Ilse A. W. Johnson of Mount Vernon, N. Y., named George T. Baker, airlines president, as a defendant.

Mrs. Johnson charged Baker with "waste of assets, deliberate and unlawful breach of duty" and with having "controlled and dominated all other officers and directors."

She alleged that Baker refused to negotiate a labor dispute which arose from the discharge of a pilot, and from which stemmed a strike against the company by 106 members of the AFL Airlines Pilots Association. The walkout began February 3.

Auto Output Rallies After Holiday Week

Detroit, Sept. 16 (AP).—Motor vehicle production in the United States this week will total 91,724 units, Automotive News estimated today.

The trade paper said the factories last week turned out 72,612 vehicles, being slowed by the Labor Day holiday and labor disputes. This week's assemblies were described as about 18,000 cars short of expectations because of a body supplier strike that has halted assemblies by Packard and Chrysler.

The paper reported Ford is increasing output, turning out about 3200 cars daily.

This week's assemblies, it reported, will consist of 65,025 cars and 26,699 trucks.

Mt. Rainier Case Against D. C. Man Put Off to Monday

Robert Aaron Blankenship, 21, charged with larceny of articles from lockers at Kaywood Gardens, Mount Rainier, Md., nearly three years ago, was arraigned in Hyattsville Police Court yesterday. The case was postponed until Monday, however, to permit police to bring owners into court as witnesses.

Chief of Police Gene Plumer of Mount Rainier said that Blankenship had been arrested in Washington in 1946 and sentenced to serve 18 months for bringing stolen goods into the District. He was released on parole June 3 although Mount Rainier police had filed a detainer. Chief Plumer said 40 lockers had been rifled, mostly of luggage, from June to December, 1945.

Locker robberies began again June 22 until September 4 when Mount Rainier Policeman John J. Chop captured Blankenship coming out of the lockers with alleged stolen property in his hands. Chop has 17 charges of larceny against him, Chief Plumer said.

Blankenship's Washington address was listed by the parole board as 20 7th st. se., Chief Plumer said.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Newlyweds Wrangle Over Husband's Refusal To Wait on Wife to Get Dressed When He's Ready to Go Out; He Often Leaves in Huff

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: We've been married only two months and already a baffling problem has arisen. Roy is very sweet and I love him dearly, but when we go anywhere he always thinks I should—or must—be ready to start the moment he is.

Since we generally go out after supper, I do the dishes while he's in the bathroom; then I begin to get ready and naturally it takes me longer than it takes him, but he doesn't realize that. He says if I'm not ready in a stated time, he'll leave without me, and he has done so.

I have tried to explain to him that if he would either help with the dishes or wait patiently I would be able to go with him as he wishes; and he likes to have me go with him; but he refuses to help with the dishes and doesn't like to wait until I'm ready.

He Never Listens to Her Viewpoint

HOW can I get him to understand my viewpoint and wait for me, instead of running off? He refuses to listen to me and will not accept my explanations. When I try to explain myself about anything he either picks up the paper and reads, or turns his back on me and ignores me completely.

I can't imagine why he acts like this, he finds out sooner or later that I am generally right about things; but whenever he gets angry he runs off, and sometimes I don't even know why he is angry. He won't sit down and talk things over; and seems to think he is—or should be considered—right in everything; and that nobody should oppose him even if he is wrong.

I know he loves me, yet he treats me as if I don't know anything; and he expects me to cook his meals, keep his clothes cleaned and pressed and the house in order and be ready to go whenever he is. I do my best to please him, and I can ignore most of his faults, but his habit of walking out on me is really distressing. Please advise. V. P.

Man's a Walking Nervous Breakdown

DEAR V. P.: Roy's behavior is a blend of obstinate infantilism and active psychoneurosis.

His infantilism is revealed in his refusal to face facts, discuss differences, see reason and work cooperatively in relation to you; also in his bullheaded assumption that you are to cater slavishly to his creature-wants and jump through hoops trying to please him.

His impatience to be "on the go" is a jittery trait; and so is his irritability with any factor that imposes delay. A person who can't idle the motor, so to speak, in leisure hours, but must be dashing hither and yon as if the devil were on his heels, is a walking nervous breakdown, as the saying goes; and Roy's jumping-jack tension after supper certainly puts him in that ailing category.

It seems you are an opposite type: better balanced, with healthier nerves; psychologically more mature; less resistant to chores and routine, and by nature methodical and slow in pursuing a daily duty-routine. Thus from the angle of temperament, you are mis-

Newest Equipment in 'Homes of '48'

Cook's Tour to Latest Kitchens

By Lucia Brown

WANT to wash dishes without getting your hands wet? Cook dinner while attending a bridge party? Get rid of the garbage can forever?

Then take a tour of the "Homes of '48" and look at the latest equipment that makes these and many other kitchen miracles possible.

Ranges, refrigerators, dishwashers, garbage-disposal units, cabinets, lighting, built-in radios—they're found in all their most modern forms in the 13 beautiful homes in The Washington Post-sponsored housing show.

It's a good chance for Mr. and Mrs. Washington to view the new, compare different makes of equipment, see how they look in the kitchen, and pick up ideas about "galley" arrangement. And hundreds of Mr. and Mrs. Washingtons have been doing just that during the past five days.

Yesterday, we joined them for a cook's tour of some of the exhibit houses and found that sinks with built-in dishwashers and garbage-disposal units were getting a large share of the kitchen comments.

Sinks Et Al

"What a difference that would make in my life!" sighed one homemaker, as she looked over a sink unit in the Paul P. Stone house in Hillcrest Gardens, Md. It is the first such unit made by Henry Kaiser, wartime shipbuilding king, to be shown in Washington. Included in it are a dishwasher driven by water power and an electrically operated garbage-disposal unit.

The Camalier & Crosby house on Turner Lane in Chevy Chase, Md., is among other homes with a three-way sink unit. This is made by General Electric and has two stainless steel bowls, one of them used for the automatic dishwasher.

Garbage disposal units are found in a number of kitchens that don't boast dish-washers. These will take everything but very large bones, grind them up, and wash them down the drain.

Even the taps at the sinks are something to brag about these days. In the Morris Cafritz house, at 821 Crittenden st. ne., it's proudly pointed out that you have finger-tip control on the tap, which operates like a lever instead of by the faucet principal.

Cabinets and Work Surfaces

Many steel cabinets covered with gleaming enamel were seen in the kitchens we visited. A lot of them have "no hardware showing", which means that there are no knobs or pulls on the doors. You open them by pulling the bottom edge, where there is a small indentation for this purpose.

Mop and broom closets were considered important by the equippers of these kitchens, too. The one in the W. C. and A. N. Miller house in Spring Valley is twice the ordinary size, we noticed, and has double doors.

In a number of kitchens, plastic was used in covering the tables and other work surfaces. It comes in pearlized and linenized finishes and will not stain or scratch, we are told.

Ranges and Refrigerators

Most of the best-known makes of electric and gas ranges were found in the houses—General Electric, Magic Chef, Detroit Jewel, Westinghouse, Well-Built, Norge and others. Each has its own distinctive features—deep-well cookers, clocks that cut heat off automatically, fast-heating units, extra storage space, or streamlined switches.

Refrigerators made by most of the well-known manufacturers were seen. They vary from the less expensive models in the smaller houses to de luxe 8-foot jobs with big boxes for the storage of frozen foods. Space for frozen things and meats is provided in all models to a far greater extent than in the old refrigerators.

Lighting and Ventilation

The clear white glow of fluorescent lighting brightens many of the kitchens. In some, it is used in ceiling fixtures; in others, to give extra light over the sink and other working areas.

Windows were planned to give

THE washing machine is located in a niche in the kitchen wall. Mrs. Nevius likes this idea because she can work at the range and counter across from it while the machine does the laundry. The California style dwelling is the Nevius' first house. They are moving to it from an apartment at 8317 Draper Lane. Both are long-time Washington residents, Mr. Nevius having been one of the first Washington men released from the Army on points in 1945

By Gene Jones—The Washington Post.

MRS. LEONARD M. NEVIUS (above) and her husband liked this kitchen—and the rest of the house—so well that they bought the model home built by Carl M. Freeman in Hillwood Manor off New Hampshire ave. extended. They'll move in when the "Homes of '48" exhibit ends October 10. In the picture above, Mrs. Nevius examines the de luxe gas stove in the kitchen, which stretches halfway across the front of the house. The cabinets, designed by Raymond Loewy, famed industrial designer, made a big hit with Mrs. Nevius. Upper doors have no knobs, are opened by pulling on the bottom of the door where there's an indentation for this purpose

Visitors Welcome

Visiting hours at the 13 model houses in the "Homes of '48" show are from 2 p. m. to 9 p. m. on week days, 10 a. m. to 9 p. m. Sundays.

The homes, which are located in the District and nearby Maryland and Virginia, will be on display through October 10. A map showing how to reach them can be obtained at the front counter of The Washington Post or at any of the houses.

Thirteen local builders and 13 local furniture dealers constructed and furnished these charming houses and are cooperating with The Washington Post in sponsoring the show.

Ask Anne — About Serving Tea and Coffee

I have just acquired a silver coffee and tea service and I would appreciate a discussion in detail on serving. Could you answer the following questions: (1) Where there is no maid, does the hostess rise to hand the tea or coffee to the guest where the guest is not within arm's reach?

G. L.

From your question, I infer that the type of tea you have in mind is a small, informal one where the tea is served from a small table in the living room. At this type of tea, where only a few guests are present, the hostess pours the tea, asking a friend who is seated near by to pass the cups to those out of her reach. Or, she asks a friend to pour, leaving her (the hostess) free to do the passing, replenish dishes, etc. If there are more than four or six guests, she would probably choose to serve the tea in the dining room. In this case a friend would be invited to pour and the hostess would be free to assist where necessary.

(2) Does the hostess drop the lemon into the cup or place it on the side of the saucer?

If the guest being served is near enough to the person doing the pouring for her to be asked her preference as to lemon or cream, the lemon would be placed in the cup if the guest wishes it. At a large tea, where each guest comes to the dining table to be served, it is easy to ask each individual her preference and serve accordingly. On the other hand, when serving in the living room with guests seated around the room it may not be as easy to ask individual preferences. In that case, the best plan is to place the lemon on the saucer where the guest may use it if she wishes.

(3) In serving coffee, does the hostess pour the cream into the cup, or does she pass the cream pitcher?

As suggested above, the hostess may, if convenient, ask the guests their wishes as to cream and sugar, then place them in the cup. Or, they may be passed when all

Fifth Avenue Joins Capital's Fashion Row

By Peggy Preston

FIFTH AVENUE moved down to our own Connecticut thoroughfare yesterday and made itself at home in a red brick Georgian building known as the Franklin Simon Washington store.

Washingtonians gave the new shop a ready welcome. Long before the doors opened at 11 a. m., a crowd of over 200 had gathered on the sidewalk. Promptly on the hour, bells announced the opening, and the eager throng, composed almost entirely of women, rushed inside.

"Bottlenecks" began developing immediately. The first took place at the elevators, where everyone tried to get on the same car to reach the dress department on the second floor. A half hour later a long waiting line had formed before the fitting rooms as women sought to try on coats, suits, dresses, etc.

Next most popular section was the millinery. Before the shop was an hour old, the new stocks of hats had already been shown—and tried on—by hundreds of women. There were waiting lines, also, in the shoe department.

All of which led some visitors to ponder whether or not there was sufficient stock to supply demand.

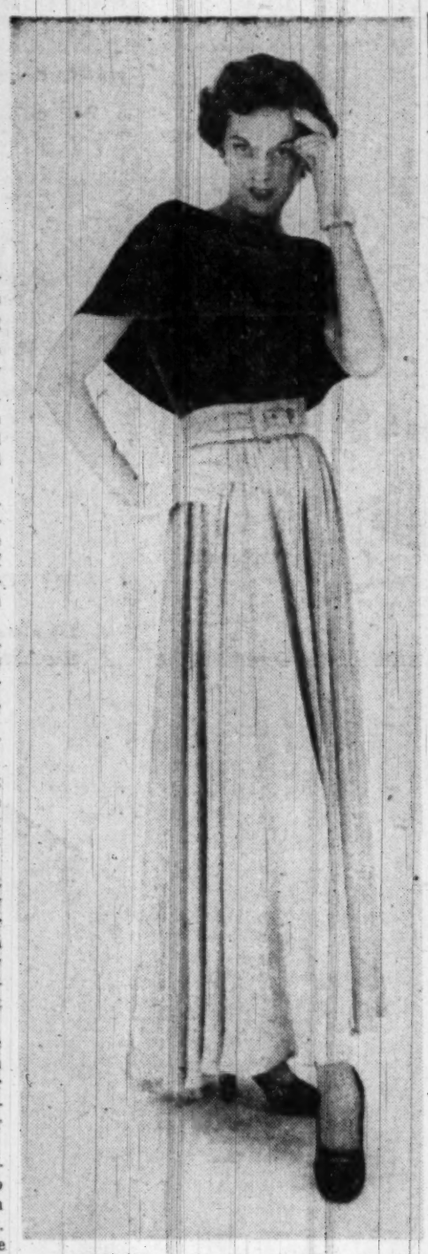
"If I come in here to buy a certain dress that I want right away, will a salesgirl tell me I'll have to wait until it is ordered from the New York store?" a woman asked a shop executive. "That always makes me mad."

Franklin Simon does not claim that this will not happen occasionally. "But we have made every effort to make this a complete store," the manager said. "We are stocking this branch store with complete lines which we have chosen exclusively for the Washington clientele. We hope to maintain a full selection of styles and sizes to meet all demands."

All departments of the New York store are represented in the local one, including a section devoted to clothing for men and boys. Other departments are lingerie, jewelry, cosmetics, accessories, etc. There is also one section each for teens and toddlers.

In the dress department there is a nice collection of clothing for women who wear sizes 36 to 44 and larger. Medium-priced dresses are shown alongside expensive outfits by the name designers.

The physical aspects of the store itself are pleasant, and, we like to think, typically Washington. Gegorgian in architecture, rather than modern, it blends well with the old historical buildings of the Capital. The interior walls are done in pale, muted pastels combined with soft tones of gray. Lighting has been given special attention, designed to be easy on the eyes and at the same time give the customer good vision of all merchandise.



A NOVEL combination of fabrics lends distinction to this dinner dress, one of several shown at the opening of the new Franklin Simon store yesterday. The top has a deep, graceful bertha of black satin, while the skirt and waist accenting belt are of creamy beige crepe. Comes in misses' sizes

YW Leaders From Abroad Meet Diplomatic Corps Wives at Tea

By Genevieve Reynolds

World reconstruction topics were interspersed with back home news when 30 young YWCA leaders from 26 foreign countries met a large group of diplomatic wives. Occasion was the D. C. Young Women's Christian Association's tea honoring the distinguished visitors yesterday afternoon. The party was in Barker Hall, following a morning of sightseeing trips to the United States Capitol, Supreme Court, Library of Congress and other historical sites.

The young leaders from Siam, Burma, India, Turkey, Egypt, Ceylon, Korea, China, the Philippines, Great Britain, Chile, and other countries immediately cornered off the chats with the diplomatic representatives from their respective native lands. Lady Franks, wife of the British Ambassador, and Miss Isabel Catto of London, who heads all British YWCA War Services at home and abroad, chatted with Lady Berendsen, wife of the New Zealand Minister.

Mme. Bonnet Attends

Mme. Bonnet, wife of the French Ambassador, reminisced with Miss Jacqueline Audra, a member of the Paris YWCA staff.

Among the other diplomatic wives present were Mme. Dendramis, wife of the Greek Ambassador; Mme. Economous Gouras, wife of the Greek Counselor; Mme. Ariburun, wife of the Turkish Military Attache; Lady Rama Rau, wife of the Indian Ambassador; Senora de Dillon, wife of the Ecuadorean Ambassador; Mme. Thor Thors, wife of the Icelandic Minister, and her daughter, Margaret; Mme. Slotemaker de Bruine, wife of the Netherlands Counselor; Mrs. Norman J. O. Makin, wife of the Australian Ambassador; Mme. Zaky, wife of the First Secretary of the Egyptian Embassy; Mme. Noury-Esfandiary, wife of the Iranian Charge d'Affaires; Signora Catalano, wife of the Second Secretary of the Italian Embassy.

Supreme Court wives who come to meet the youthful YWCA leaders included Mrs. Harold Burton and Mrs. Wiley Rutledge.

Officers Receive

Receiving with the honored guests were Mrs. Howard G. Nichols, president of the Washington YWCA; Miss Mabel R. Cook, executive director, and members of a committee arranging the Capital visit for YWCA leaders.

A tour of the city last night rounded out the young leaders' three day visit to the Nation's Capital where they attended a White House tea, met outstanding women in government and YWCA work here. Following breakfast this morning the group will disperse to all sections of the United States to study individual YWCA procedures.

Ask Anne

have been served with the beverage.

(4) What is the waste bowl for?

The waste bowl is a receptacle for any coffee or tea which remains in a guest's cup when it is returned for a second serving. By pouring out the leftover beverage, the second cup will be as hot as the first had been.

(5) Is it proper to use paper wrapped sugar cubes, and if so, does the hostess remove the paper before dropping the sugar into the cup?

For home use, the unwrapped sugar cubes, served with tongs, are preferable.

(6) Is the napkin handed to the guest with the cup?

Yes, the napkin is placed under the serving plate and handed to the guest in such a way that she takes the napkin at the same time she takes the plate.

(7) If a guest desires a second cup of tea or coffee, is it proper to pour right into the used cup, or is a clean cup used?

For a second cup of beverage, use the cup which was previously used.

Indian Visitors Honored

A WORLD famous beauty and her handsome husband, the Maharajah and Maharani of Jaipur, shared honors at a cocktail party given yesterday by the Indian Ambassador and Lady Rama Rau. The Finance Minister of Jaipur, Armanath Atal, who accompanies them, was also an honor guest.

The colorful drawing room of the embassy was decorated with russet and white flowers for the occasion, and long French windows were thrown open onto the wide terrace.

Guests included diplomats and high ranking officials of the Government. Cocktails were served with an assortment of hors d'oeuvres which included special Oriental dishes.

The Maharani attracted a great deal of attention yesterday in her sari costume of powder blue gossamar with gold trim. She is considered one of the 10 most beautiful women of the world. Her mother, the Maharani of Cooch-Behar, is a friend of Queen Mary, and as a young woman she was considered the most beautiful in all India.

Another Epic Brewing

Maestro DeMille Turns To 'Samson and Delilah' As His Latest Spectacle

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

HOLLYWOOD—To our way of thinking there's nothing more relaxing than watching a Cecil B. DeMille spectacle. So hearing the maestro was quivering on the brink of another epic, we hustled over to Paramount. On October 4 shootings commence on "Samson and Delilah" starring such perfect physical specimens as Hedy Lamarr and Victor Mature, with George Sanders and Phyllis Calvert featured.

It seems that Samson is an old DeMille favorite and he started combing the Middle East for suitable production knicknacks back in the early thirties but the whole venture was shelved in 1935. DeMille accumulated several storage rooms packed to the ceilings with bolts of silk Oriental costumes, a staggering amount of authentic jewelry, furniture and such.

During the lean wartime years Paramount producers wheedled in vain for a smith of silk, a hunk of silver, turquoise. DeMille refused to give and even went so far as to raise peacocks on his ranch, saving the feathers for costumes. Judging from the sketches of Hedy Lamarr's exotic peacock gowns, the birds couldn't have been too active feather-growers.

As usual DeMille's acquisitiveness was justified with such tremendous backlog of equipment he's keeping the production on a new lot budget of three million dollars with only 62 days actual shooting time. But since Palestine is scarcely a place these days to drag a bunch of fancy actors, the backgrounds, the myriad long shots, all the animals, and such were photographed by Ralph Jester during a 3 months period in Egypt.

DeMILLE can complete a picture in jigtime because he works on it for a year or more at his desk, employing a technique of having every single phase of action first reproduced in pencil or water color sketches. Thus when he actually steps on the set the action is all pre-arranged and he never has to improvise or waste hours rehearsing. In addition, sets are constructed in miniature. In the scene where Samson pulls down the temple pillars the destruction is so cunningly devised that each chunk tumbles excitingly yet somehow avoids marring a single Mature muscle.

Mr. DeMille's personal offices, two smallish rooms, are quite a sight. The walls are covered with pictures, many of them mere pages torn from newspapers but showing Samson and Delilahish costumes and there's a valuable Gustave Dore etching, DeMille being a great admirer of the gloomily famous artist. Around the walls, chairs, sofas, shelves are covered with books, stacks of pictures, suitcases filled with Oriental necklaces, bracelets, each tagged with its price and place of purchase, feather headdresses, spears, sketches of the Lamarr peacock ensembles, of scenes inside the temple.

His desk was so littered there was scarcely elbow room. A partial list of objects included a gob of polished granite with a cross carved, a string of amber beads known as a chapelet in Middle East countries, two silver elephants supporting a receptacle for a manuscript scroll, a small statuette of a winged calf supposedly dated 1200 B. C., an ordinary 3-minute hourglass, coins, a silver perfume bottle, three nickel size bullets in a wooden holder, inexpensive ships clock, a pad inlaid with a carved coral plaque, a small glass reliquary topped by a scenic picture of Jerusalem, a white ivory elephant, a miniature saber, a dagger, a magnifying glass, a box of shells, a photograph of himself as a curly haired young man.

DeMille, who's 68 yet looks 50, was born in Washington, N. C. He learned his stuff most probably from his father, who started as a teacher then went into show business with Belasco. At one time the young man owned the first airplane hire line in the country. In some way Eddie Rickenbacker was associated with him.

He's been in the movie business for 35 years, has produced 286 pictures, of which he's personally directed 86.

His first picture was "The Squaw Man" which cost precisely $10,000. The barn in which it was filmed is still on the Paramount lot and is now a gymnasium. He remade "The Squaw Man" in two other versions but his favorite of all time is "The King of Kings," which, believe it or not, is still being shown.

PERSONALLY, DeMille is a most agreeable person, whose extracurricular hobby is a ranch some 40 minutes from Hollywood at Ta-Junga, where wild animals are protected and where no press or cameramen are ever allowed. It's a primitive retreat and once a guest counted 40 deer browsing on the lawn. DeMille is crazy about apples, eats them persistently and one of his pet economies is saving cores to put in his tobacco boxes. His other very human economy is tearing up old scripts, using the backs for jotting notes.

He's been married 45 years, has one daughter, three adopted children and ten grandchildren. He seldom goes out socially, spends almost every evening watching a movie in his private theater. He's most uncritical, seems to like even the most vapid efforts.

On rare occasion he honors those he considers worthy with what's called the DeMille Medal. It's really a half dollar issued to commemorate the founding of Raleigh, and DeMille managed to buy most of the issue. He presented President Roosevelt one for his foreign policy; Gary Cooper has one because DeMille liked his work in "Dr. Wassel"; while Joe Thompson, his square faced Irish prop man, has half a dozen for thinking up ingenious devices which tickled the maestro.

Among all the producers DeMille incidentally is the only one whose name can be run solo on a marquee without mention of a picture title, yet still draw capacity houses. In Egypt for instance just the words "DeMille spectacle showing" brings all the Arabs running.

mated in double-harness; and where you would like to win Roy to your tortoise-pace, he insists on your hitting his stride.

Wife Should Plan for Jiffy-Change

SINCE you love Roy dearly and wish to relieve friction on the point at issue, my advice is, profit by experience and plan ahead for the evenings, so that you will be ready for a jiffy-change if he wants to go out.

(1) To simplify kitchen work, rely on tasty supper-menus that can be more or less pre-cooked during the day and re-heated for serving. (2) Treat yourself daily to a late afternoon bath and pretty-up session, followed by a change of garb from the skin out, and thus be fresh as a daisy when Roy gets home. (3) Stack the dishes after a faucet rinse-off and do a nose-dive into your street clothes, when Roy suggests squiring you somewhere.

If Roy finds you changing your gait to suit his, instead of arguing endlessly that you can't, he may become more malleable too; but I wouldn't want to bet on it. In my opinion, he is very inferior husband-material; and if you contrive to make the marriage last, with any degree of personal content, you will be passing a miracle of sorts.

Rainbow at the Feet

This fall is to be a season of dressmaker dresses, coat dresses of tweed, straight-skirted box suits, fitted suits, big loose coats, lots of knitted details. The color scheme calls for a subdued rainbow at the feet—greys, mochas, blues, greens, browns, and after-five colors like raisin, blueberry, pine, taupe and mocha. Footwear in shades like blueberry and rust will have stockings to match. The leather soles, basis for lasting style and smartness in shoes, are utilized skillfully to blend, complement or contrast with uppers as the mood of the shoe dictates.

On the Town

COME rack, ruin, recession, races and wrecks, Guy Lombardo seems to reign on. The leader of the muted trumpet orchestra brought his boys into the Embassy Room of the Statler Wednesday and the crowds were standing at the door from 8:00 in the evening on waiting for a chance at a table. The Crosley sized dance floor was filled to capacity all evening, and according to the word going around the hotel, will continue to be filled for the balance of the ten-day engagement. Guy is leading the orchestra with one arm since he smashed his boat, Tempo VI, in a recent race. While he's on the floor he simply holds the broken wing at his side. When the orchestra takes a break for a smoke, out comes the black sling.

Lombardo

According to one of the bandsmen we met across the street in Aaron's during one of the intermissions, his latest wreck may put an end to the Lombardo racing career. Seems that Guy is one of the few owner-drivers in the business. Airplane manufacturers have been building their own boats and hiring someone else to drive them. Since the Tempo VI represented a substantial investment and would cost a considerable amount to replace, Guy may give it up.

The Casino Royal opened their fall festival revue this week with a line of girls. They beat the rest of the town in with a chorus line. They're the six Winnie Hovler dancers. The routines are cute, if a bit dated. The wind-up number is very military with something that sounded like Columbia the Gem, etc., for background music. We might add that apparently girdles are not being worn this season.

Ray Motte (King size) and Pedro (sample size) bounce each other around the floor in an amusing sort of way. Topper in their act is the balancing of Pedro on Ray's head. During this they're head to head with no other means of support. Pedro (the upside down one) drinks a glass of water from the position.

Larry Lazar emcees the Casino show.

JAMES BRAHMS (co-owner of Olmsted's) had a pleasant surprise a day or two back when a friend from France whom he hadn't seen for years dropped into the restaurant. The friend was attending an insurance convention in town. You may be sure that before he left both Brahms and his partner, Leonard Mitchell, had policies in their pockets. To square things up, friend insurance man brought the better part of the convention down for dinner. Who came out tops financially on the deal we don't know.

Model Kitchen Tour

maximum light and air. The Luria Brothers house at 2637 North Quantico, Arlington, Va., has four different exposures, including windows and doors. In the house built by Cambridge Construction Co., on the Alta Vista terrace, Bethesda, Md., there is a large glass window over the range to give plenty of filtered light for working.

Fan ventilators are an important feature of nearly every kitchen. Sometimes these are in the sidewall, sometimes in the ceiling. The one in the Milton Isen house, 411 Franklin st., Alexandria, is a 10-inch exhaust fan, we noticed, installed in the wall over the range.

Unusual Location

Most unusual location for the kitchen is seen in the Carl Freeman California house in Hillwood Manor, where it's hard by the front entrance. The kitchen has three doors, opening onto the front hall, the side porch, and the living-dining room.

"There's no point in losing out on the neighborhood gossip just because you have to get dinner!" says Mr. Freeman, builder of the house. "Here, you can look out the front window and cook at the same time."

To make up for this forward location of the kitchen, the living room is in the rear, opening onto a large flagstone terrace. Here the family can sit in the summer time, well protected from the gaze of the passing public.

At the Ralph Construction Co. house in Wheaton Hills, Md., it was pointed out that the kitchen opens out on the living room as well as the dining room, making it easier to the housewife to go to the front door when callers ring the bell.

Almost every kitchen either had a dinette at one end or immediately adjacent to it. When there isn't a dining room in the house, these dinettes are extra spacious so that a table large enough to seat guests can be used.

Radio in Kitchen

Just so you won't get bored, Camalier & Crosby have built a radio into the wall of the kitchen of their Chevy Chase house. It's located in a corner suitable for a breakfast nook, can be turned on by the housewife as she does her morning work or by the family craving music with its meals.

The breakfast nook in the Stone house in Hillcrest Gardens hasn't a built-in radio, but it does have clever stepdown shelves on the wall. These shelves, adjacent to the table, can be used for the toaster, the radio, percolator, or extra dishes.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

When Feller Walks 10 Is He a Wild Indian?

These days, when you see a headline saying "Indians Score Important Victory" you don't know whether Bobby Feller pitched a winner or New Delhi troops are sweeping into Hyderabad.

But it was even worse in 1939, when New York and Cincinnati squared off in the World Series. In those days it was:

"Reds Ready to Battle Yanks."

MISCELLANY

Pat Newton of Lucketts, Va., was a passenger on a bus that was stopped by a speed cop the other day. Pat asks: "If a policeman MUST give a bus driver a ticket, does he have to bawl the driver out in such a way as to embarrass him before 40 passengers?" . . . The "bawling out." Pat, is a policeman's way of reminding you that it's illegal and unsafe to speed. But I'll agree with you that it's not necessary to embarrass the culprit . . . Dorothy H. Bladen of Annandale, Va., made me promise that I wouldn't forget to tell you about the fall fashion show which will be given tonight (8 p. m., social hall of the Annandale Methodist Church, 25 and 50 cents). The modest admission charge includes refreshments and entertainment . . . Here's an unusual twist: 15-year-old Barbara Nachman of 5705 Blair rd. ne., wants to know whether I've been getting a gander at "that bright star in the south at sunset." If so, I can call it by its proper name, which is Jupiter. (At age 15, I thought most girls were interested in movie stars, rather than the astral kind). Incidentally, Barbara also says, "If you should get up before sunrise and see another planet high in the east, that would be Venus" . . . I don't get up that early, Barbara, but I'll keep that in mind the next time the losers at our poker party want to keep playing "one more hand" all night long.

PERSONAL NOTES

R. E. Doughty, 1238 W st. se.: Your mention of O. O. McIntyre recalls the fact that he once worked for the Cincinnati Post, and that he used to tell a good story about a grand old Post reporter named Al Segal.

One bleak day-before-payday (according to the yarn) Segal was counting the few modest coins which comprised his bankroll, and wondering whether he had enough money to eat lunch.

The office wise-guy came along, and struck Al's hand—sending the coins flying in all directions.

Muttering dark threats, Segal got down on all fours and began probing under desks, behind radiators and steam pipes, and into the crevices in the rickety old floor.

When he rose to his feet some minutes later, there was a wide grin on his face and $3.19 in long-lost coins in his hand.

DEATH TAKES A HOLIDAY

Mrs. J. E. Cloer of 3622 Horner pl. se. is just back from a trip through Pennsylvania, where she saw some really effective roadside advertising.

Near Halifax, on Route 14, a monument company has erected tombstone-like signs which bear the message:

"Drive carefully. We can wait."

VAGRANT THOUGHT

Just how old are these fellows Hill and Tibbitts, anyhow?

OLD GRAD

Mrs. Kathleen H. Mair of 3654 New Hampshire ave. nw. is still chuckling over a paragraph from our morning contemporary which said:

"The prospective bridegroom was graduated from Groton in 1904, and is now a senior at Princeton University."

He must have been a pip of a football player to have been welcome around Princeton that long.

WE'RE JUST KIDDING

Ginny LaMaster of 321 34th st. ne. says she had no trouble understanding this sentence, clipped from her favorite (that's us) Washington newspaper:

"Star-chaser Shapley is a down-to-earth guy who's just as eager to play with the kids, including his grandmother, as he is to compute orbits of double stars."

"Obviously," quips Ginny, "Grandma is just a kid at heart."

DRAWBACK

Overheard: "I'm telling you, it's really a relief to have the kids back in school. The only trouble is, I don't have anybody to send to the store during the day; I have to go myself."

ON KEEPING COOL

If East-West troubles e'er explode,
We'll all of us get burnt.
Let's hope the crisis doesn't pass
The fatal Berlin pernt.

NEW YORK.—Harold Stone, who played important roles in "Bell for Adano" and "One Touch of Venus," went to Hollywood recently to visit George Tobias, the Warner Brothers actor. He hoped to get an acting job there, but none came up. Then Stone learned that Bretaigne Windust, who directed "Life With Father" and was under contract to Warners for $3000 a week, had taken a minor post as dialogue director to learn the elementals of movie-making. "Maybe," Stone suggested to Tobias, "you can help me get started as a dialogue director—like Windust" . . . Tobias, remembering Windust's brilliant background, roared: "Go back to Broadway and direct the Lunts first."

Stone returned to New York and during an afternoon stroll noticed Lynn Fontanne, the star and wife of Alfred Lunt. Miss Fontanne kept looking at the buildings and Stone offered: "May I help you?" . . . "I'm looking for No. 17," said Miss Fontanne . . . "This is No. 11. There's No. 17," said Stone. Miss Fontanne thanked him . . . "Oh, by the way," Stone called after her, "would it be proper for me to say that I directed you—that is, from No. 11 to No. 17 East 47th st?" . . . "Of course," the star replied. Stone rushed to Western Union and wired Tobias: "Just directed Mrs. Lunt. How about that job?"

Bill Gaston will be given the Democratic nomination for Congress in Fairfield County, Connecticut, this week, to run against Representative John Lodge. Gaston's father ran against Lodge's father for the United States Senatorship from Massachusetts 24 years ago . . . One of the most famous alcoholics in New York fell off the wagon, on the rim of the Grand Canyon and wound up living in an Indian abode for a few days. Three blood transfusions brought him back to his senses and on the wagon again . . . The first Mrs. Clark Gable has taken up residence in New York. She always speaks of him with affection and respect.

Charles Trenet, the French cafe singer, has been released from Ellis Island. He bought a dictaphone to keep beside his bed while he sleeps, because someone told him his nocturnal mumblings might produce some ideas for routines. He played the recordings, which were incoherent, and became so troubled that he's being psychoanalyzed.

Andre Gide, the Nobel Prize winner and author of "Symphonie Pastorale," is not a member of the French Academy. "If it were offered to you, would you accept?" Gide was asked. He replied: "I doubt it, because then I could no longer write certain things" . . . "But if you became a member," he was told, "if you became one of France's immortals—then maybe you would wouldn't want to write those certain things" . . . "Yes," sighed Gide, "and that's what scares me."

New Thomas Charges Are Aired

By Drew Pearson

On August 4, 7, 10 and 13 this column published various statements reflecting on Congressman J. Parnell Thomas of New Jersey, chairman of the Un-American Activities Committee. It was reported that Representative Thomas had persuaded the Army to keep two soldiers away from the battle front and in return Parnell Thomas had received substantial campaign contributions from their families.

It was also reported that the New Jersey Congressman had put Myra Midkiff on his payroll for four years though she did no work in his office and during which time she kicked back her salary to him personally. It was also reported that the Congressman put a cleaning woman, Arnette Minor, on his payroll for a short time, who also kicked back her salary to him, and that following this, Miss Grace Wilson, aunt of Mrs. Thomas, was put on the Thomas payroll for $2500 for two years, until the Congressman pressured officials of Bergen County, N. J., into putting his wife's aunt into a county home.

This column now wishes to apologize to Congressman Thomas.

It is deeply regretted that these reports were unfair to him, in that they omitted some of his operations and failed to report all of his amazing capabilities for brazenly feeding at the public trough.

While other members of the Un-American Activities Committee have kept their skirts clean and let no nepotism mar their effectiveness, the chairman of their committee has been just the opposite. Here is more of Thomas' record:

Daughter-in-Law on Payroll

Beginning in 1946, Thomas put his daughter-in-law, Lillian Thomas, on his payroll at $2900—despite the fact that she lives in Allendale, N. J., and never comes near the office. When Newman Wright of the Passaic Herald News queried Thomas about his daughter-in-law he claimed that she "carried a heavy load of work." Other members of the Thomas staff say that she "does nothing." Lillian is still carried on the payroll, however, though at a reduced salary.

In July, 1947, Thomas added a new name to his payroll, Mrs. Jacqueline Voss Hill. Mrs. Hill did a little work for the Congressman, but not too much, first, because she was about to have a baby; second, because it became apparent that she was not supposed to work. She was on the payroll so she could kick part of her generous $3000 salary to the Congressman.

This became evident later. For when Chairman Thomas went on his junket to Panama last winter and was taken ill, he sent a letter, February 2, 1948, to Miss Vera Halyburton, his secretary, which read in part:

"My protracted stay here will necessitate some quick bookkeeping on your part. I assume from Mrs. T.'s (Mrs. Thomas) letters to you that you have placed Jackie's funds in Sis's hands."

Simultaneously, Mrs. Thomas wrote from Panama to Miss Halyburton as follows:

"He (the Congressman) says to take a couple of days off and go to Allendale and get the money from Jackie and give to Sis to pay the household bills. I think the money goes to Jackie the first of the month."

By this time Jackie Hill's salary had been transferred from Congressman Thomas' own payroll to the House Un-American Activities Committee's payroll. She was listed as clerk and typist for the committee and was supposed to help expose un-American activities. How she could do this while living in Allendale, N. J., is difficult to understand.

However, the Congressman did not hesitate to use part of the salary paid out by the Un-American Activities Committee for supposedly bona fide employes, to pay his own personal bills.

That is another chapter in the record of the New Jersey Congressman who poses as one of the greatest examples of good Americanism in our Nation.

Note—It is against the law for any Government official to require a Government employe to kick back a salary.

Little Communist

Ben Crosby, assistant chief of the State Department's Public Liaison Division, was talking on the phone to a capital newsman when the loud wails of a baby came over the wire.

"Who's making all the racket?" asked Crosby.

"I'm calling from my home," explained the newsman. "That's a little Communist we have here."

It was Crosby's turn to yell.

"Don't ever, ever say that word," he warned, "when you're talking to the State Department!"

Constitution Day Lobby

The real-estate lobby has got itself in such bad public odor that it is now trying to stage a comeback by capitalizing on Constitution Day.

As a publicity stunt, the real estate boys also dug up a couple of dead trees from the homes of Washington and Jefferson at Mount Vernon and Monticello and made special gavels for the Constitution Day meetings. They also wangled a chunk of the battleship Missouri from Secretary of Defense Forrestal, rolled it into thin strips and fastened a strip to each gavel.

Path to perfection

We do not like to make mistakes . . . However great or small . . . And constantly we hope to keep . . . From making them at all . . . But hope alone is not enough . . . To reach that perfect height . . . And wishful thinking will not turn . . . A wrong into a right . . . It takes our earnest effort and . . . Our perserverance too . . . To be exacting and correct . . . In everything we do . . . We have to strive relentlessly . . . And always be on guard . . . If we would write the highest score . . . On every tally card . . . And when a few mistakes occur . . . Despite our diligence . . . We should be willing and prepared . . . To take the consequence.
